Graham Admits Profits of $6165 In Grain Deals

Truman's Doctor Acknowledges He Didn't Sell Out As He Told Press

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Although President Truman's personal physician, Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham protested yesterday he didn't know anything about commodities, he admitted he "cleaned up" $6165.25 in the market in four months last fall.

He confessed to the Senate Appropriations subcommittee investigating speculation in foodstuffs, that he didn't close his account on October 7—two days after President Truman had denounced such speculation as "just plain gambling," as he had previously told the press.

He admitted he sold 10,000 bushels of wheat almost three weeks later, on October 25. He said he thought the President was referring only to wheat in his October 5 speech. So the White House doctor thought he was obeying the presidential injunction against speculating in commodities when he switched his account to cottonseed oil on November 21 and to cotton on December 6, he said.

Pauley to Resign Soon

Meanwhile, Edwin W. Pauley, whose commodity speculatoins have been under fire, said in a statement that he expects to leave his post as assistant to Secretary of the Army Royall" sometime this month."

Pauley pointed out that he had told The Washington Post last September 16 and had reiterated the statement in December, that he expected to hold the office only "three or four months," a limitation that would end his services this month at the latest. His statement was issued to deride what he called claims by Harold Stassen, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, that Stassen had made "disclosures" regarding Pauley's trading operations and to prevent Stassen's claiming that his disclosures had caused Pauley's forthcoming resignation. Pauley insisted in his statement that Stassen had made no revelatoins about Pauley's transactions," all of which have been cmopletely legal and ethical—that has not already been made known to the Senate committee."

Original Stake Doubled

Between August 6, when Graham first bought 10,000 bushels of wheat and the day he finally closed his account at Bache & Co. Washington office on December 18, he had run his investment of $5700 to $11,865.25, more than double his original stake.

In protetsing his innocence of market operations he:

1. Said he doesn't know what margins are.

2. Asked Chairman Ferguson (R., Mich.) of the committee: "Is lard commodities?"

3. Stated he once saw a notice from Bache & Co. that he had bought "10 M bu wheat"—and thought it meant 10 million bushels until the broker said it was only 10,000.

4. Expressed surprise that his transactions hadn't taken place in the "stock market," and plaintively argued that he didn't know the difference between the stock market and grain exchanges.

"I Got Worried"

The much-bemedaled general, snappily attired in his Army uniform and wearing the shoulder cords indicating his White House assignment, admitted that he had "a bad time" while President Truman was delivering his now-famous blast at commodity speculation on October 5.

"I was all clouded up when he started talking," Graham explained.

"Then as he got along I got a little worried. I kept asking myself did I have any wheat.

"I don't know just when in the speech it hit me," he added. "It started out slow, and then all of

French Elect Herriot as Assembly Head

Near Fights Between Reds, Foes Mark Uproarious Session

Paris, Jan. 13 (AP).—Edouard Herriot, prewar premier and leader of the Radical Socialist Party, was today reelected president of the National Assembly in an uproarious session marked by near fistic encounters between Communists and their foes.

The 76-year-old ailing Herriot received 317 votes compared with 124 for Communist Raoul Calas and 17 for former Socialist Premier Paul Ramadier.

The vote was taken after a group of right wing deputies walked out of the chamber during a speech by the Communist Presiding Officer Marcel Cachin.

Cachin had launched a strong criticism of France's refusal to grant nationalist demands of the Viet Namese leaders in Indo-China. gan to sing "The Volga Boatman" gan to sing "The Volga Boatmen" and as the tumult grew the Communists responded with "La Marseillaise."

"You're off key!" a right wing deputy shouted at the Communists.

The Council of the Republic, the other house in the bicameral Parliament, reelected Baston Monnerville, Negro member from French Guiana, as its president. Monnerville, a Radical-Socialist, got 194 votes to 75 for Communist Georges Marrane.

Later the parliamentary presidents of the various party groups Max Lejeune as the Assembly's met and agreed to elect Socialist first vice president instead of Communist Jacques Duclos, who held the post last year.

This was a departure from tradition calling for election of a representative of the largest party in the Assembly to that office. The Communists have the largest single representation.

Duclos walked out of the meeting and said the Communists would accept no Assembly officers.

Wrecker, Plane Follow Auto Through Lake Ice

Bay City, Mich., Jan. 13 (AP).—The automobile of John Sanborn of Midland, Mich., broke through the ice of Saginaw Bay while he was fishing nearby.

A pilot, attracted by the crowd on the ice, landed to see what was going on. His plane broke through also.

GOP Plans Budget Slash Of 3 Billions

Taber Is Hopeful Of Deeper Cuts But Senate Leaders Favor That Figure

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A three-billion-dollar slash in President Truman's 39.7 billion budget, leaving room for both tax cuts and debt reduction, emerged last night as the minimum objective of GOP budgeteers.

Some Republicans talked hopefully of deeper cuts. Said their No. 1 ax man, House Appropriations Chairman John Taber (N. Y.):

"Four billion would be better and five billion sweeter."

Party polisy-makers on the Senate side of the Capitol inclined toward the more likely three-billion cut, approximately the amount Congress pruned from the current budget.

One top Senate GOP fiscal authority, who asked not to be identified, reasoned this way:

"It is possible to trim three billion without reducing defense items or any fixed costs. We might do it even without Marshall Plan reductions, though I think there will be some."

Would Cut Taxes, Debt, Too

He siad a three-billion cut would move the budget surplus up from President Truman's 4.8 billion estimate to 7.8 billion.

That would leave room for a general tax slash "in the neighborhood" of five billion dollars and a 2.6 billion reduction in the National debt, heargued. (The Senate last session set 2.6 billion dollars as their own debt reduction goal).

The initial showdown will come on "legislative budget" recommendations the law requires Congress to set by February 15. So far there hasn't been a meeting of the Congressional Joint Budget Committee. A backstage battle was shaping up on what it will do when it meets. These differences have developed:

1. Senate Republicans want to postpone the budget-pacing process until April, to permit a closer look at Marshall Plan costs and tax-cutting possibilities. House leaders prefer to set spending ceilings on schedule, by February 15.

Who Will Head Joint Group?

2. There's a mix-up over who will head the joint budget group. Taber led it last year, and it was assumed Senate Appropriations Chairman Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) would head the new committee. House members command the most votes and may reelect Taber chairman.

3. There are signs of the same sort of differences over money goals that deadlocked the last legislative budget. The House voted to cut Mr. Truman's 1948 budget six billion dollars. The Senate voted a 4½-billion cut. A stalemate resulted. In the end, Congress cut spending less than three billions.

Some of the differences may be ironed out at the first of a series of one-a-week conferences between House and Senate GOP leaders, late this week or early next. The interhouse talks await the return of Speaker Joseph W. Martin, pr. (R., Mass.), who has been ill. Martin plans first to call a meeting of his own House Republican Steering Committee.

Resolution on Ceiling Date

Senate Republicans tentatively plan to go ahead with a resolution postponing the date for setting budget ceilings until April 1 or later.

They may incorporate in the resolution these amendments to the Congressional Reorganization Act: (1) The Byrd-Butler bill to put appropriations through Congress in one omnibus measure. (2) Authority for the Joint Budget Committee to employ a enlarged staff of experts.

Senate Republican Steering Chairman Robert A. Taft (Ohio), leading advocate of a legislative budget postponement, is about to open fire on the President's 39.7 billion recommendation. It will be Taft's second retort to Mr. Truman in a week.

Sailor Tells of 18-Day Ordeal On Drifting Mine Sweeper

NO MORE DRIFTING—Radioman William B. Hopkins, jr., 27, lost two weeks in the central Pacific aboard a powerless minesweeper, is reunited with his wife at their residence, 218 11th st. sw. He returned yesterday

Even the Potomac on a balmy day holds no appeal now for one man just returned to Washington.

William B. Hopkins, who came back to his home yesterday at 218 11th st. sw., after an Odyssey on a minesweeper that set the world astir, minced no words in discussing bodies of water.

"The only thing that will take me back to the sea," he said, "is a national emergency." Perhaps, he reconsidered, curling a strand from his long beard around one finger, "I may go near the Potomac this summer—but only for fishing."

Hopkins, who is 26, drifted for 18 days aboard a powerless mine sweeper in the South Pacific last October with two other merchant seamen. They were left behind when a Navy tug towing them to

Murphy Trial Record Faces House Review

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Trial of Fire Chief Clement Murphy and the investigation which led to filing of charges against him will be reviewed at the Capitol, it was announced yesterday.

Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.), chairman of the House District Subcommittee on Public Service, said that group has decided to call for complete records in the Murphy case when the trial is completed.

There was no assurance, however, that the subcommittee would take other action, because Beall emphasized he now believes the case to be an administrative matter, to be handled by the Commissioners.

As the trial continued yesterday before a three-man civilian board in Municipal Center, eight more witnesses testified on the charges that Murphy "demoralized" his department.

Among them were Battalion Chiefs John L. Werheim and Carlisle S. Paterson (considered as

Incommunicado Arrests Admitted

Post Accused of 'Conspiracy' Against Police in Clegg Case

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Washington Post was accused of a "conspiracy" against the police department, and police officials admitted "investigation" prisoners were held incommunicado, in the second day of the Clegg case hearings

The charge and the disclosure was made at the police board trial yesterday of three policemen accused by Julius Willie Clegg, Negro war veteran, of unjustifiably arresting him, illegally detaining him 34 hours, and mistreating him.

Clegg, who's 26 and lives at 1106 21st st. ne., was arrested around 6 a. m. of Saturday, August 2, at 13th and F sts. nw., while he was going to work, and allegedly held incommunicado for "investigation." The arrest was the result of a complaint that a Negro had molested two white women in that vicinity on previous mornings.

Defense Counsel Charles Ford yesterday asserted that The Washington Post had "entered a conspiracy" against the police department, and especially against the three accused policemen, Pvt. John G. Gibboney, Det. Sergt. Alex K. Kopsol and Special Investigator David S. Ennis.

Ford asserted that The Washington Post had put up Clegg, a clerical employe of the newspaper, to bring "false charges" against the police.

The defense attorney further accused The Washington Post of printing "derogatory articles" over a period and thereby "undermining the morale" of the police department, "with the ultimate result that the policy of divide and conquer will be put into effect here."

Assistant Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch protested that the conspiracy charge was "far afield" from Clegg's complaint against the three policemen on trial. The three-man trial board sustained the prosecutor's objection, and ruled out further defense argument along this line. Defense Attorney Ford noted an exception, for possible appeal to the District Commissioners.

Ford's attack on The Washington Post was made a few minutes after Roger Robb, attorney for The Washington Post and its employes appearing as witnesses in the case, including Clegg, won a limited right to appear in the case. Over the protest of Defense Attorney Ford, the board ruled that Robb might appear to protect the constitutional rights of his clients, even though he had been subpenaed to appear as a witness for the defense and would normally be excluded from the hearing room until called to the witness stand.

In a brief statement to the board, Attorney Robb declared he wanted to be present during interrogation because of the "ob-

U. S. Supplies Called Ample For Aid Plan

Will Easily Stand European Shipments, Anderson and Krug Insist to Senators

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

American food supplies and natural resources can easily stand the strain of shipments to Europe under the Marshall Plan, Secretaries Anderson and Krug assured the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday.

Anderson, speaking with a confidence which Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg said left him "a little breathless," said the United States could export even more wheat than contemplated if it had a more vigorous food conservation program.

Both Cabinet officers contended that the European recovery program would be good for American self-interest—in the case of food by maintaining markets for American farmers and in the case of natural resources by spurring the development of foreign sources of scarce minerals.

Witnesses Complimented

Their testimony was the breeziest and most buoyant yet heard by either of the congressional committees now taking testimony on the Marshall Plan. It impressed the Senate committee so much that compliments were showered on both witnesses by Republican and Democratic members alike.

Anderson told the Senators there could be no real recovery in western Europe unless more food was available for workers and their families.

"Otherwise," he warned, "the old vicious circle will continue—underfed miners producing too little coal, which produces too little steel, which produces too few farm tools and fertilizer, which, in turn, produces too little food. Adequate food is essential, both to the human energy and, possibly more important, to the human determination, necessary to revive Europe's lagging economy."

Conservation Needed

Anderson conceded that the proposed wheat exports to Europe would delay "our return to more desirable land use practices and make necessary a more intensive conservation program." He also said it would mean the "sharing" by American farmers of "a small amount of farm machinery and nitrogen fertilizer."

But in his prepared statement, and in his answers to committee members, he insisted the European recovery program would help all American farmers directly or indirectly.

"Not only will this program be of long-time economic benefit to our Nation, and not only can we carry it through—we have no practical alternative but to carry through a program of this magnitude," he said.

He told Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) that rationing would not be needed because of exports under the Marshall Plan. "But it will be difficult to conduct a good export program without conservation," he declared. "While we are planning to send 450 million bushels of wheat, we ought to send 500 million, and we can do it with a conservation program."

Meat Shortage Seen

He said no meat except horsemeat would go to Europe under the Marshall Plan, but he foresaw a serious meat shortage in the United States in the spring. To get ready for it, he said, the Administration should have rationing powers in its hands now.

Secretary Krug stressed the importance of developing new sources of scarce minerals abroad and substitutes at home. Senator Tom Connally, from oil-producing Texas, commended him especially for proposing intensified efforts to develop synthetic liquid fuels in the United States.

"We can do the job from a standpoint of our resources and facilities," said Krug, dealing with the fuel and other mineral requirements of the Marshall Plan. "Indeed, the export burden under the program is not likely to be as great as the one we handled last year. Some of the supply prob-

20,500 Planes Asked as Starter In Atom Defense

Air Policy Board Fears Attack After Dec. 21, 1952; Urges 18-Billion Budget

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

President Truman's Air Policy Commission warned yesterday that the United States will be in "serious danger" of an atomic attack after December 31, 1952, and called for an immediate start on preparations to deal with it.

Our defense, it said, must be built around a powerful air arm—much stronger than now. Three billion dollars more should be spent this year and next to expand American air power to a total of 20,500 planes, the five-man civilian board recommended. Much greater sums, they added, will be required later.

Their report—entitled "Survival in the Air Age"—was made public by the White House. President Truman issued an accompanying statement, urging Congress and the American people to study the recommendations "with care."

Calls for New Strategy

America, the commission recommended, must adopt a new strategic concept for its defense. Heretofore we have had but on force "in being"—the Navy—with the Army and Air Force skeletonized in peacetime.

"Now we must defend both the water approaches and the air approaches," it was said.

Terming the present 55-group Air Force of 580 heavy bombers, 2300 fighters and 8000 other "active" craft "inadequate" even for present conditions, the group said it would be "hopelessly wanting" five years hence.

An additional 12,800 planes are in storage, it was said. They will be obsolete in two or three years.

We should start building up immediately to a first-line force of 12,400 new planes organized into 70 Regular Air Force, 27 National Guard and 34 Air Reserve groups plus 8100 modern replacement craft, it was said.

Such an air armada, together with an Army and Navy of approximately present size, would run the defense bill to 18 billions a year by 1952, the group estimated.

Would Foster Civil Aviation

Coupled with the direct defense recommendations were a number of proposals to improve civil aviation as a part of air power. The group urged:

Creation of a Department of Civil Aviation within the Department of Commerce, headed by a Secretary without Cabinet rank, in somewhat the same way the three defense departments now are under a Cabinet-member Secretary of Defense.

Higher mail pay rates to aid the ailing airlines. First-class mail should be carried by air when it would speed delivery and air parcel post should be begun later.

The aircraft manufacturing industry should be strengthened by maintaining annual military production levels of at least 30 to 40 million (airframe) pounds. Military aircraft procurement orders should be spread over five years to permit better planning.

The commission's study took five months and included exhaustive questioning of top defense officials and survey of intelligence data, statistics and strategic plans. Thomas K. Finletter, New York attorney and war-time State Department aide, headed the group.

Security Through Preparedness

Other members were: George P. Baker, Harvard transportation professor and aviation authority, Palmer Hoyt, publisher of the Denver Post; Arthur D. Whiteside, New York financier, and Henry Ford 2d, auto builder. Ford withdrew because of inability to attend meetings and John A. McCone, West Coast manufacturer, replaced him.

Their report, which was unanimous, declared that absolute security can be attained only by abolishing war. We must work for this through the United Nations, but meanwhile achieve "relative security" by strong armaments, the group concluded.

"World peace and the security of the United States thus are now the same thing," it was said.

The report divided the future into two parts, strategically. Phase I is the period in which the United

Truman Faces New Selection On CAB Head

Senate Unit Balks At More Top Military Men in Civilian Jobs

President Truman last night faced the prospect of choosing a new candidate for chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board as a Senate committee balked at putting more top military men in Government civilian jobs.

The Senate Armed Services Committee turned down a proposal to permit Maj. Gen. Laurence B. Kuter to take the post and keep his Air Force rank and pay.

Kuter, now American representative to the International Civil Aviation Organization, told reporters in Montreal that he had "no intention of resigning from the Air Force."

Asked Special Act

The President had asked Congress last week to pass a special bill allowing Kuter to keep his military status and pay of $15,144 a year. He gets $8800 normal salary, $4400 flight pay and the remainder in allowances. Basic law provides $12,000 a year for the CAB chairman, but appropriations limit this to $10,000.

Yesterday, the President's Air Policy Commission recommended that the board be expanded from five to seven members, and that all be paid $15,000 a year.

The Senate Committee approved the nomination of Mark Edwin Andrews to be Assistant Secretary of the Navy, but deferred all other service nominations for consideration today. A long list of appointments of generals and admirals was held over from the special session.

Letter Sent President

After yesterday's meeting, Senator Chan Gurney, (R., S. Dak.), chairman of the group, wrote Mr. Truman, telling him of the action. He said that members present were unanimously opposed to the trend of appointment of ranking military and naval officers to civilian jobs and did not like such efforts to nullify salary limits on such posts.

The President wanted Kuter to take the post vacated by James M. Landis.

Landis, former dean of the Harvard School of Law, left the CAB December 31 when the President failed to reappoint him. Kuter's appointment came as a surprise. Most persons in Government circles had predicted the nomination of Stanton Griffis, Ambassador to Poland.

"We did not want to set a precedent of approving military men for civilian posts," Committee Chairman Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.) told newsment. He added that the decision was based on principle and "did not reflect on General Kuter's record."

Went 'Steady' With Laughlin, Woman Tells Abortion Jury

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Esther Pickard Hobbs, pretty 23-year-old brunette, yesterday testified in District Court that she had kept "steady company" with James J. Laughlin, 42-year-old criminal lawyer charged with procuring an abortion for her when she became pregnant through their intimacies.

Mrs. Hobbs, nee Esther Pickard, remained coldly poised throughout her 15-minute stay on the witness stand before court was recessed at 4 p. m.

Her demeanor was in sharp contrast to that of Laughlin, whose face reddened and jaws clenched as he spied her entering the courtroom, clad in a smart red suit. He watched her closely but she kept her gaze directly to the front where stood Prosecutor Charles Murray plying her with questions.

She said she came to the District from Raleigh, N. C., in January, 1945, and that she was introduced to Laughlin in February, 1946, through a client of his. Later she stated she first met the lawyer in September, 1945.

"Did you become friendly with him?" Murray asked.

"Yes," Mrs. Hobbs answered.

The witness then told of "keeping steady company" with the attorney soon afterward.

Shortly before court recessed, the young woman identified a number of letters and cards, among them a valentine, which she said

Laws of Nature Involved

Bacteria (Rhizobium) Patent Going Too Far, Justices Told

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

From its dull and heavy grist of law the Supreme Court turned yesterday to sweet nature's simple lore.

The justices, like so many high school boys, sat quietly through two lectures. First they learned about the love life of Bacterium Rhizobium, then about the adventures and travels of shrimp (as in cocktail). Later on one or two of the justices will write term papers, or opinions, as they are called, on these subjects.

Beans and alfalfa and the like have a way of taking nitrogen out of the air—where there is a lot of it—and putting it in the soil, where farmers would like it to be because it makes things grow. Beans and so forth do this much better if their seeds are coated with little organisms called bacteria. But most kinds of bacteria are standoffish, and do not get along with other kinds.

An expert named Varley Sherman Bond worried about this for years, until he found out that B. Rhizobium if a much more friendly type. Coat seeds with B. Rhizobium and the bacteria multiply like crazy. Besides that they fix nitrogen in the soil better than ever.

Being a practical man, Bond went straight to the patent office, and got Patent No. 2,200,532 on

We'll Stay in Berlin, U. S. Says Bluntly

Gen. Hays Gives Forceful Answer To Soviet's Implied Ouster Threat

Berlin, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Maj. Gen. George P. Hays, deputy American commander in chief, answered an apparent Russian campaign to oust the western Allies from Berlin with the blunt assertion today that the United States forces intend to stay here until all Germany has been unified.

Hays' statement was intended, on the surface, to quiet fears of Germans that the American, British and French forces might withdraw and leave the German capital to the Red army. Actually it went deeper. It constituted a forceful retort to the implied threat in the official newspaper of the Russian army here that Russia might seek to force the western Allies out of Berlin because of the recent Anglo-American agreement on unity of western Germany.

Radio Moscow, in a broadcast recorded tonight, gave a long string of figures to create the impression that the Allies are pulling out of Berlin.

But General Hays announced flatly, in a statement published on the first pages of American and British licensed Berlin newspapers, that the United States will not only stay here but will not even talk of any change in the present four-power setup.

American military government officials, increasingly angry over Russian affronts to Americans in Berlin, called a conference for tomorrow on the advisability of protesting against the detention of President Herman B. Wells of Indiana University and three other Americans for three hours Sunday.

British Headquarters Threatened in Germany

Duesseldorf, Germany, Jan. 13 (AP).—A threat to blow up "Steel House," Ruhr headquarters of the British military government, caused new tension tonight in the British occupation zone.

A large group of German police was placed about the six-story building after the threat was delivered by telephone.

"Steel House is going to be blown up," the message said. "This is a warning."

20,500 Planes Asked to Repel Atom Attack After Dec. 31, '52

States has a monopoly on atomic weapons. Phase II will begin when other nations have them in quantity and can deliver them against us in a sustained attack.

A major war during Phase I is unlikely, but because of the possibility of the world "blundering" into war we must be prepared during this period, the group concludes.

Guided Missiles Estimate

Analyzing the present prospects of supersonic aircraft or guided missiles being developed and other powers perfecting A-bombs, the report concludes:

1. We must have by the end of Phase I a reasonably strong defense establishment to minimize an attack. This should include a radar warning network and balanced land and sea forces. The former, however, should not become a "Maginot Line" diverting us from "our best defense against atomic attack."

2. Our main defense, it is said, should be a "counter-offensive" air force, built around a fleet of 700 heavy bombers and long-range missiles when perfected. Existence of such a force would serve notice to an aggressor that we would strike back with devastating force if attacked.

Biological Warfare a Threat

3. The "target date" by which we must have this powerful air force of 20,500 planes was set at January 1, 1953.

The commission said that other forms of attack should not be overlooked. Biological warfare, spread by means of sabotage, is a vital threat at the present time, but can be prevented by alertness, it stated.

Members of the commission declared that they considered the Navy's presently authorized air arm to be adequate. This calls for 5793 first-line planes, backed by 5100 reserves.

It rejected a Navy recommendation that this force be expanded to 8000 first-line craft, with 6500 in reserve, saying that this was part of an expansion of the over-all fleet which should be left for later consideration by the Joint Chiefs of Staffs.

Asks More for Navy Planes

However, the group did propose additional appropriations for the Navy to replace its aging wartime built planes. It urged increasing the present Navy budget to spend 192 million dollars more in the calendar year 1948 and 310 millions more in calendar 1949.

The commission's recommendation for the Air Force was an increase from $2,850,000,000 to $4,150,000,000 in 1948 and a further boost to $5,450,000,000 next year.

Presenting tables projecting the cost of national defense to 18 billions by 1952—based on its air power proposals—the commission said that it made them "with the utmost reluctance." The military estimates had been critically examined on the theory that every dollar spent on arms "is a dollar to be grudged."

Navy Still Essential

Sizable economies should be possible under unification and a broad strategic study now being made by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, it was said.

While backing fully Air Force expansion proposals, the commission conceded that a Navy must be maintained. The Air Force, it stated, cannot now operate from continental United States against enemy centers overseas.

Advance bases are necessary for the present, it stated, to secure such points and to prevent our homeland from being assaulted in turn. A fleet, spearheaded by carrier aviation, is required to seize and supply such bases and keep the sea lanes open to supply the United States with essential materials produced overseas, it was said.

Ask Transport Merger

The Commission made these other major recommendations:

(1) The Air Transport Command of the Air Force and the Naval Air Transport Service should be merged.

(2) Wartime security measures should govern the release of technical information on military aircraft development. At the same time, the people should be fully informed of what is going on where secrecy is not vital.

(3) The present policy of competition on international airlines is working and should continue. The "chosen instrument" plan was disapproved.

Air Route Study Urged

(4) The Civil Aeronautics Board should defer any new certifications of airline routes, pendinga survey of the current situation. Freezing of the present pattern, however, would be undersirable.

5. The CAB should have control over international rates and economic control over all air carriers for hire. Surface carriers should be pevented from taking over control of any key segment of the air transport industry, but should not be automatically barred from developing air transport as a coordinated service.

6. Regularity of airline service is highly important. A Government corporation should be formed to finance the development of navigational aids, safety appliances, as well as new cargo planes.

For 2-Year Defense Reviews

7. There should be a detailed review of American defense problems every two years by a high-level board of civilians.

8. An Air Safety Board of three members should be set up within the proposed Department of Civil Aviation. Safety regulations should be issued by the department instead of the CAB, which should remain independent.

9. Under the proposed reorganization, all nonaviation functions of the Department of Commerce should be handled by a Secretary of Industry and Trade, without Cabinet rank. Eventually all executive transportation functions should be brought under the Department of Commerce, with a Secretary of Transportation replacing the Secretary of Civil Aviation.

Atom Power Use Limited, Expert Says

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—A prediction that atomic power may never be useful except for special purposes was made today by Sumner T. Pike, one of the five United States Atomic Energy Commissioners.

"It is very possible," he said in a talk to the Cooper Union Forum, "that before the end of 1949 there will be a pile in operation which will make some power as a by-product. It seems likely that this plant may not make more than enough power to run the pumps and blowers and other auxiliaries.

"We look for success, but at a date so far away that no one need worry about the utility of his present plant, or other plants now being constructed.

"It seems reasonable to expect that atomic power will come in gradually, will serve to supplement rather than replace other sources, and may never do more than to fit into niches for which it is particularly suited.

Nuclear energy, Pike explained, must be reduced first to heat, and heat is the lowest form of energy.

"To go on from heat to something that turns 'round and round,' he said, "and gives s, let's say electricity, means the loss of about three fourths of the energy originally released."

Difficult jobs in metallurgy face the atomic power makers, Pike said. Ordinary structural materials, such as steel, have such a depressing effect on the nuclear reaction in a pile that they probably cannot be used.

lems will be knotty, but they will diminish as the world economy gets into production."

Answering Senator Lodge (R., Mass.), the Secretary said the present oil shortage on the East Coast and in other areas would exist "with or without these exports." Only about 3 per cent of the domestic oil supply was scheduled for export under the Marshall Plan, he said, and most of Europe's requirements would be met from the Middle East.

Middle East Oil

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), apparently thinking of political unrest in the Middle East, asked what would happen if Middle Eastern oil were "unavailable."

"I have a feeling," said the Senator, "that it won't be as available as this plan presupposes."

"I share your concern," Krug answered. "If the Middle East can't be counted on, then we will have to provide more than is being planned. It would create serious repercussions here, but it could be met."

"We would have to do it by rationing products in this country. We could do it if we had the will to make the plan work."

Today, Secretary Snyder goes before the Senate Committee, not only as Secretary of the Treasury but as chairman of the National Advisory Council, which is the supreme interdepartmental body of the Government dealing with foreign economic policies.

He will be questioned on at least two important issues: first, the dollar holdings of French and other private citizens in the United States, and second, the method of deciding whether a foreign country should get its help in the form of a free grant or a repayable loan.

Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas and other Administration witnesses have explained that ability to repay will be the criterion for deciding between a grant and a loan. But they have emphasized that Snyder, as chairman of the N.A.C., will have the dominant role in making each decision as it arises.

On the other side of the Capitol, Ambassador Douglas spent morning and afternoon sessions explaining the European recovery program to the House Foreign Affairs Committee, with the help of big wall charts he had previously used in the Senate hearings. Cross-examination of Douglas will begin in earnest this morning, with critical questions expected on administrative aspect of the program.

Council of Churches Backs Marshall Plan

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 13 (AP).—The Marshall Plan for European aid was indorsed as "indispensable" today by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

The council's executive committee called the European recovery program "one of history's most momentous affirmations of faith in the curative power of freedom and in the creative capacity of free men."

However, the committee warned that the United States must not use the program to make over Europe in its political or economic image.

Wherry Group Discusses Corporation to Handle Europe Aid

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Twenty Republican Senators have formed an informal caucus to discuss control of Marshall Plan funds by a Government corporation independent of the Executive branch, including the State Department, it was revealed yesterday.

Senate Republican Whip Kenneth S. Wherry who issued the invitation and acted as chairman of the first meeting Monday night, said the session was merely a discussion of the European Recovery Plan and no conclusions were reached.

The Nebraskan disclosed, however, that the group named a steering committee including Senators Joseph H. Ball (Minn.), C. Wayland Brooks (Ill.), Homer E. Capehart (Ind.), Edward V. Robertson (Wyo.) and William Knowland (Calif.) to formulate policy for further meetings.

Wherry called the first meeting semosocial and said he had invited Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Mich.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator Robert A. Taft (Ohio), chairman of the Republican policy committee. No member of the Foreign Relations group attended. Taft was not present.

Had Two-Fold Purpose

Senator Clyde M. Reed (Kans.), at whose Stoneleigh Court apartment the meeting was held, said the session had a two-fold purpose:

1. To discuss world responsibilities of the United States and

2. To avoid a breach in the Republican Party on this important foreign policy issue during an election year.

Many of those who attended, however, agreed that most of the discussion centered about the establishment of a Government corporation, similar to RFC, to handle all Marshall Plan funds.

There was considerable sentiment, it was reported, to send over American experts to determine whether it would be economically feasible to spend Marshall Plan funds, for example, to reopen certain coal mines or re-establish certain transportation lines.

U. S. Technical Experts Needed

Some of the Senators who had been abroad last summer have reported that one of the greatest needs in Europe, drained of much of its manpower by years of war, is technical advice and assistance American experts.

The corporation plan under consideration is similar to that proposed by the House group headed by Representative Christian Herter (R., Mass.).

In testimony on Capitol Hill, Secretary of State Marshall has firmly opposed such a suggestion, asserting that the United States cannot have two secretaries of State.

Marshall has testified that under the proposed Arministration plan at least 80 per cent of the decisions on how to spend the funds would be made without consultation with the State Department, but he said, the Department must be able to act quickly on European relief in an emergency.

Some members of the caucus said there was no objection to leaving formal administration of the plan, in its relation to foreign government, in the hands of the President and the State Department, but insisted the money must be handled by a government corporation.

Some Want Amendments

Wherry said that some members of the group favored the Administration plan, some were against any sort of Marshall Plan, and others were interested in amending the Administration proposals.

If the caucus finally reaches an agreement on a single given policy it will be a powerful bloc in all Marshall Plan discussions.

Some caucus members freely predicted passage of some sort of Marshall Plan by the Senate within 90 days, with another month more for it to be implemented by appropriations.

Other senators who attended were Henry C. Dworshak, Idaho; John W. Bricker, Ohio; C. Douglass Buck, Del.; Harry P. Cain, Wash.; Zales N. Ecton, Mon.; Albert W. Hawkes, N. J.; William E. Jenner, Ind.; James P. Kem, Mo.; Joseph R. McCarthy, Wis.; George W. Malone, Nev.; Chapman Revercomb, W. Va.; John J. Williams, Del., and Milton R. Young, N. Dak.

Senators Homer Ferguson (Mich.) and E. H. Moore (Okla.) had been invited and were expected to attend but were unable at the last minute to be present.

Seven Navy Officers Are Reassigned

Reassignment of seven ranking Navy officers was announced yesterday.

Vice Admiral John D. Price, Commander Air Force Pacific Fleet, has been assigned to duty as Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Air. Vice Admiral Harold B. Sallada, Deputy Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific Fleet, will take over Admiral Price's former job.

Admiral Price will relieve Vice Admiral Donald B. Duncan whose new assignment has not yet been announced.

Rear Admirals Sidney M. Kraus and Paul L. Mather were ordered to inactive duty. Both are assigned here, Kraus at the Navy Department and Mather at WAA. Rear Admirals Samuel P. Ginder, Commander Carrier Division 3, swapped commands with Rear Admiral Marshall R. Greer, Commander Carrier Division 2.

Rear Admiral Roscoe F. Good, Commander Cruiser Division 1, was ordered to command Cruiser Division 3. His successor was not named.

All Epirus Believed Periled by Guerillas

Threat Reported as Greece Acts to Fight Inflation and Army Advances on Mountain

Athens, Jan. 13 (AP).—A highly placed Greek military informant in Ioannina declared today that all Epirus was in danger of falling to the guerilla forces of Markos Vafiades.

His statement came as Dwight P. Griswold, chief administrator for the American mission to aid Greece, announced that the Greek government had agreed to impose bank credit controls to fight inflation and take other vigorous action "to help themselves."

A new army offensive was launched against a force of 800 guerillas on famed Mount Parnassus, 75 miles northwest of Athens, with an amphibious operation from the Gulf of Corinth. Commando units moved ashore near the port of Iratini before dawn and occupied heights guarding passes used by the guerillas, a military spokesman in Athens said.

The military informant at Ioannina said communist-led guerillas had concentrated strong forces at strategic points close to the Albanian border.

Griswold's statement on the anti-inflation program was made at a news conference, and some interpreted it as implying that the American mission had not been satisfied with cooperation from the Greek government up to now. Griswold said he felt positive action would be forthcoming in the future.

A reliable source said a mission memorandum to the government several days ago criticized Minister of War George Stratos for lack of cooperation and suggested that if cooperation were not forthcoming he should be removed. The informant said the suggestion for his removal was eliminated later from the memorandum but the mission's "thinking in this matter has not changed."

Griswold said it was likely that he would go to the United States shortly in connection with the European aid program. Eugene Clay, financial adviser to the mission, will leave for the United States early next month, he added.

That the plane dropped sharply into the trees was indicated by absence of any long swath through the timber and the fact that the wreckage was not scattered over a wide area.

The cabin, flipped over on its back, was all but torn in two immediately back of the pilot's compartment. Rescue squads used fire-axes and crowbars to release injured and reach bodies. There was no indication of fire.

En route from Houston, Tex., to Boston, the plane made a stop at Winston-Salem, N. C., before clearing for Washington.

Apparently operating normally until the moment of impact, the transport had been in a "holding pattern" south of National Airport to permit another plane to land.

There was no evidence of icing conditions. The surface temperature was 37 degrees. Base of the clouds was 1400 feet, and forward visibility was 4 miles. The pilot, in radio communication with National's tower, said he was contact, meaning he could see the ground.

His last words to the tower were "stand by" in response to a query for altitude of the cloud base.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration record of the radio conversation with the craft showed Saltanis reported at 4:26 a. m. he was over Doncaster, a check point between Mount Vernon and the airport. He was instructed to go to Mount Vernon at 2500 feet. A minute later, another plane reported in from 3000 feet over the Arcola radio range, west of Washington and had beeff cleared for a landing. Saltanis was then told to go to 3500.

When he asked why, the tower explained arrival of the other plane and Saltanis presumably started his ascent.

At 4:31 a. m., he was told to descend to 2500 feet and two minutes later was cleared to the tower and asked to report when he got below 2500 feet, and when he left Mount Vernon.

The tower received no acknowledgement of the order. Up to that point, the plane's radio signals were "fairly readable," but the tower asked for a tuning count on his radio. Saltanis then came in "loud and clear."

He replied "stand by" on the request for cloud base altitude.

"When I saw the lights of Washington, I said to myself, 'Well, we're here,' and settled back in my seat," said Stone, one of the injured passengers.

"Then there was a terrific crash—spang, bang. Then I seemed to feel the plane go up, over and down. There I was, hanging upside down by my safety belt on the ceiling—or it seemed like the ceiling to me. When I jerked the safety belt loose, I fell on my head. But that safety belt saved me.

"I saw the steward (Philios) and told him we'd better get out of her; this thing might explode."

Roar of the plan's motors was heard by Mrs. Jane Schumann, 26, of 7601 Fort Foote rd., whose home is almost directly under the approach run to the airport.

A few seconds later, she heard a crash; then saw a momentary flash. Peering out from a second-story window, she saw nothing and prepared to return to bed when she heard a faint call for help.

She telephoned Bolling Field; was told there were no planes up. She called the Naval Air Station, which notified Prince Georges County police at Marlboro.

Sergt. Richard Earnshaw investigated, and with Richard Schumann, found the wreckage about 5:30 a. m. Rain and muddy roads slowed fire equipment and ambulances, but by 5:55 the Oxon Hill volunteer fire department was at the scene. The first ambulance, brought by the Blandensburg volunteer rescue squad, arrived at 6:18.

The wreckage, fairly intact, was among 50-foot trees, 100 yards from the river on a slope rising sharply from the water. It was 60 feet from an open field about 300 yards square.

Philios, with Stone, was out of the cabin. The steward had gone back into the plane, Stone said, to get overcoats and came back with the report: "They're all jammed in there and I can't get them out."

Philios, with an injured shoulder, helped as he could, but spurned an offer of a stretcher. "Don't use that for me," he said. "I don't need it. Save it for them."

Brandt, one of the dead, had been in Atlanta, Ga., on a business trip which he cut short to hurry home after being notified of an emergency operation on his son, Michael, 6. He was an advertising and sales promotion executive.

Warner, a building contractor, was en route from Clinton to Washington on a business trip. He is survived by his wife.

Moorhead, vice president and general manager of the Joanna Textile Mills at Goldville, S. C., was bound for Boston. He leaves a wife, two daughters and a son.

Saltanis served in Eastern's military transport division during the war and was a member of the enlisted reserve corps at Mitchel Field. He is married; has one child.

Sandborn, the copilot, served with the Navy as a lieutenant-commander during the war. He is survived by his wife.

The Civil Aeronautics Board had no immediate explanation of the crash, and asked the Air Force to put armed guards about the plane until further investigation could be made. A hearing will be held in about two weeks, a CAB spokesman said.

Italian Bank Clerks End 14-Day Strike

Rome, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—The 14-day strike of 60,000 bank and credit house employes, which had gripped Italy in a slow financial paralysis, ended here tonight. Sixty thousand tax collectors who struck in sympathy also were expected to return to work.

Meanwhile, eight Communists were arrested in the Roman hill towns of Genazzano, Marino and Albano when a carabinieri search for hidden arms uncovered heavy machine guns, rifles, revolvers, thousands of rounds of ammunition and 1000 pounds of TNT.

At San Stino, near Venice, police found a second arsenal of anti-tank and cannon shells, rifles, pistols and ammunition.

End of the strike was announced after Labor Minister Amintore Fanfani and labor-management representatives signed an agreement. Banks will reopen tomorrow for normal business.

Bank workers won the $8.50 a month pay increase they had asked.

The strike affected most of Italy's 1295 banks. Workers have not been paid for two Saturdays, cutting into retail business. Industries clamored for an end to the strike. Some have paid interest as high as 120 per cent for nonbanking credit.

$350,000 Suit Filed In Air Crash Death

Baltimore, Jan. 13 (AP).—The family of Dr. Rafael Angel de Jesus Gorillo Ocampo, 45-year-old Costa Rican physician among the 53 killed when an airliner crashed at Port Deposit, Md., last Memorial Day, today sued Eastern Air Lines for $350,000 in Federal court.

The suit was filed in the name of the physician's widow and four children and contended they had been deprived of his $20,000 annual income.

The four-engine Eastern plane suddenly plummeted down while on a flight from Newark, N. J., to Miami, Fla. Investigators have never been able to explain the exact cause of the disaster, the worst in commercial aviation's history in this country.

53 Rioters Killed, 87 Injured In Italian Somaliland Battle

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Fifty-three persons were killed and 87 injured in a 2-hour battle with bullets, arrows, broken bottles and knives between Italians and Somali natives at Mogadiscio, Italian Somaliland, the British army reported today.

Rioting, murder and looting were touched off when pro-Italian gangs broke up an independence parade staged Sunday by the Somali Youth League, the report said.

The parade coincided with a visit to Mogadiscio of a Four-Power United Nations Commission investigating former Italian colonies with a view to deciding their future.

British occupation forces clamped a curfew on the city, forbade gatherings of more than five and threw "some rabble-rousers" into a camp established for Italian war prisoners.

Dimitrov Recalls Petkov Execution

Sofia, Bulgaria, Jan. 13 (AP).—Communist Premier Georgi Dimitrov, vigorously reminded nine Socialist deputies today of the fate of the executed Nikola Petkov when they criticised the government's budget.

"From this rostrum, as you remember, I warned your allies of the Nikola Petkov group 10 times," Dimitrov said in his expressive speech. "They did not listen, did not pay attention to all warnings which were made. They broke their heads and their leader is under the ground. You yourself think not to share the fate of your own allies, foreign agents and Bulgaria's enemies. If hitherto you were not wiser and do not get wiser, you will receive from the nation such a lesson as you will remember as far as Saint Peter."

Dimitrov reminded the nine oppositionists of what he said were ttheir unfulfilled predictions in the past.

These predictions, he said, were that "the Anglo-Americans would not recognize the elections of October 27, 1946, that the peace treaty would not be signed with the Fatherland Front Government.

"Didn't it come through?" he asked. "The peace was signed. It was ratified."

World Bank Waiting on Marshall Plan

The 45-nation World Bank does not intend to issue any new securities soon because it doesn't need money now, an official said yesterday.

E. Fleetwood Dunstan, director of bond marketing operations, also told a news conference the bank never has supported the price of the $250,000,000 in bonds it put on the market last July, has no intention of doing so under present circumstances, and would be reluctant to do so in any circumstances.

The bank has about $500,000,000 available for lending. Its president, John J. McCloy, has said it would not undertake any important loans to any of the 16 Marshall Plan countries until action is completed on the European recovery program. Congress is not expected to complete action before April 1, and probably later than that.

Dunstan said that even if the bank did need money, this is "not a very good time for any borrower" to issue bonds because the bond market is "unsettled."

Food Shortage Hits Moscow, London Hears

London, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Reports from Moscow indicate a serious food shortage and high-powered black market have developed in the wake of Russia's abolition of rationing and devaluation of the ruble, diplomatic observers here said today.

The British Foreign Office officially revealed that the British Embassy in Moscow had tried—unsuccessfully—to rally the entire dipolmatic corps to protest the situation brought about by sweeping changes ni the Russian economy last month.

Observers said the attempted British protest was designed to cast official doubt on Soviet propaganda reports which have painted a glowing picture of shops loaded with low-priced goods.

Actually, according to Foreign Office reports, "shopping has become a great deal more difficult" and British Embassy personnel have experienced difficulty in buying adequate food suplies since the changes were announced Decembr 14.

The reports add that a large-scale black market has developed, with prices up to three times as high as those in regular food stores.

London observers said Embassy personnel in Moscow, who had to exchange 10 old rubles for one new ruble, had been left with insufficient cash to buy in the black market.

Group Approves Andrews

The nomination of Mark Edwin Andrews of Texas to be Assistant Secretary of the Nav; was approved yesterday by the Senate Armed Services Committee. It now goes to the Senate.

The Gallup Poll

Public Sentiment Veers Toward Tax Cuts

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 13.—In reversing his last year's stand against tax relief, President Truman is reflecting a changed attitude on the part of the Nation's voters toward income taxes.

Last June, when the President twice turned thumbs down on Republican tax slashing proposals, 53 per cent of the Nation's voters felt the public debt should be reduced before taxes were lowered. Only 38 per cent polled voted for tax cuts.

Today the situation is almost exactly reversed. Now slightly more than half feel individual citizens should receive "cost of living" cuts in tax loads. However, the preponderance of sentiment for tax cuts still is not overwhelming.

A survey just completed by the Institute asked this question:

Some people say we should reduce income taxes now because of the high cost of living. Others say we should not reduce taxes now because we must give food and other aid to Europe and reduce our national debt first. What is your opinion on this—do you think income taxes should or should not be reduced now?

Should	51%
Should not	36
No opinion	13

A similar question asked last spring brought this response:

Should reduce taxes	38%
Should not	53
No opinion	9

Taxpayers are feeling the pinch as living costs rise weekly. A poll earlier this month showed more than half now think their income taxes are too high.

Politically speaking, the desire for tax reduction is proportionately greater among Republicans than Democrats. Of the former, 57 per cent want taxes lowered, while only 46 per cent of Democrats vote that way.

The public debt today is around 256 billion dollars, or three billion less than a year ago. The peak was reached at the end of February last year when it hit 278 billion dollars. Last year individuals paid 18.7 billion dollars in taxes to the Federal Government and corporations 31.2 billion.

Under President Truman's proposal individual taxes on 1948 incomes would be cut $40 across the board plus a $40 credit for each dependent. The resulting reduction in Government revenues of 3.2 billion dollars, he said, might be raised by higher levies on corporations.

Harold Knutson, Republican Congressman from Minnesota, and chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, has introduced a bill to reduce taxes by 5.6 billion dollars.

YOU SHOULD USE
15% LESS HEATING OIL
THIS WINTER
The heating oil supply situation is critical. Unless you and all other users of heating oil burn 15% less than normal during January, February and March, your home may be cold! Today the industry's production is the greatest in history—BUT—still not enough to meet the record demand. To save your 15%, take these steps now: Set thermostat at 68°... turn down to 60° at night or when away... keep radiators off in all unused rooms. use fireplace whenever possible — keep flues closed when not in use.

Jews Threaten to Blow Up Old City Wall Unless British Aid 1500 Under Arab Fire

Jerusalem, Jan. 13 (U.P.)—Jews may blow a breach in the wall of the Old City in Jerusalem, with resultant death to "many innocent people," unless British troops aid 1500 Jews isolated in the area under Arab sniper fire, a Jewish Agency spokesman said today.

British official sources at once said that the spokesman's statement was a "threat" made at a time when "our men are risking their lives every day to get food into the besieged Jewish quarters of the Old City."

British troops last night took two convoys of food into the area.

Jews attacked the Arab quarter of Sheikh Jarrah in the northern suburbs of Jerusalem today. They first told residents to get out and then started throwing hand grenades and bottles filled with flaming gasoline. The Arabs replied with fire from automatic weapons.

Thirty Arabs raided the Jewish settlement of Lahovot in far northern Palestine, near the Syria-Lebanon frontier, in what seemed a continuation of an Arab nerve war. The Arabs withdrew when British troops arrived and there were no casualties.

Last night the first batch of families of American and British businessmen left Lydda airport for Cyprus.

House Probe Planned On Surplus Explosives

By the United Press

Chairman Ross Rizley (R., Okla.) of a House Subcommittee, on Surplus Property Disposal, announced yesterday that he plans to begin hearings soon on the sale of surplus Government explosives for shipment to Palestine.

He said he also plans to confer with War Assets Administrator Jess Larson on circumstances surrounding the seizure in the New York area last week of explosives billed for shipment to the Holy Land.

British to Report

Lake Success, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The United Nations announced tonight that Britain would give the U. N. a secret report tomorrow on British plans for withdrawal from Palestine.

British Delegate Sir Alexander Cadogan, a U. N. spokesman said, had asked the Palestine partition commission to guarantee absolute secrecy and that the commission agreed.

Justices Hear Bacteria Row

his idea. Then he sold the patent to Kalo Inoculant Co.

When Funk Brothers Seed Co. began using the same idea, Kalo went to court to stop them. Funk replied that since the dawn of time big bacteria have been coming up with little bacteria and how can you patent a thing like that? In short, said Funk, Bond didn't invent anything; he just found a law of nature.

The justices are due to settle this, after they finish their home work on the briefs gotten up by the lawyers. Quite a lot of money is involved.

From B. Rhizobium, the justices moved on to the shrimp that swim in the sea. Some shrimp stay put tthe year round, but down on the Atlantic Coast they are mostly migrants. They spend the summer off the Carolinas, and as winter comes they head for Florida, just like movie stars, race horses, tourist agents and, of course, the tourists themselves.

Well, it seems the shrimp fishermen of Georgia and Florida do not like to wait for the shrimp, but send their boats up to the Carolina coast to meet them. South Carolina last winnter passed a law to stop this, putting a $2500 a season tax on the out of State fishermen. Besides that, the law says all shrimp caught off South Carolina must be brought into South Carolina ports to be packed, and must pay a tax of $1 for every 800 pounds.

A group of Georgia fishermen claim this is unconstitutional, and they want the Supreme Court to say so.

Later in the year, the justices may have a go at the care and feeding of standing timber.

Senator Green Sees Committee Leak

Sen. Theodore F. Green (D., R. I.) charged last night that Republicans on the Senate Speculation Subcommittee had armed GOP presidential candidate Harold E. Stassen with secret information which he used against Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, President Truman's doctor.

Green said Stassen was able to make his prophetic remarks because "someone" connected with the subcommittee "secretly disclosed" to the GOP candidate the information about Graham's market operations which the investigators had gotten in closed sessions.

"If any such policy is continued," the Rhode Island Democrat said, "the public is bound to conclude that our committee is operating . . . as a tail to a presidential candidate's kite."

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), subcommittee chairman, said he did not intend to argue with any committee member.

a sudden I wondered if he could mean me.

"At that time I didn't consider myself either a speculator or gambler."

He had another bad time a couple of daye later, he said, at "a bull session just a little off-the-record lunch."

"They got to kidding about speculation," he said, without identifying the others. "Somebody said: 'We pity and poor devil around here who has any wheat,' and so on.

"I kept kidding with the rest, but I was getting pretty serious after awhile."

When asked if he had heard a speech by Attorney General Tom Clark denouncing speculation as the acts of "greedy men, lustful for money" who had been dealing "in human misery," he said:

"I read that later. Some Republican Senator put it in the paper."

He attributed his incorrect statement about getting out of the market on October 7 to confusion caused by constant questioning by reporters.

"When they called me for that statement, I was certainly going around," he said.

He had another bad day he said, when he told President Truman about his dealings. When asked when that was, he said:

"Not until after all this business was finished."

"What did you tell the President?" Ferguson asked.

"I don't know what I said," Graham replied, in a low voice. "It was pretty rugged that day."

He explained his statement to reporters that he had "lost his socks" in the market. He said that he counted in losses of $11,012.86 he had sustained in the purchase of Crown Drug Co. stock of Kansas City.

He had invested $21,766.43 in Crown preferred stock, he said. After the company went through reorganization, he got common stock, which he closed out at $10,753.57.

His broker, Harry Brister, of Bache & Co., had advised him against part of the Crown purchase, so he turned to Brister to "salvage anything you can."

Brister mentioned investing in commodities.

"What are commodities," Graham said he asked. "Brister then mentioned wheat."

Graham kept interrupting his testimony to tell how highly he regards Brister.

"I want to say here that he has been very kind to me and rendered me the greatest help. I do not want anything I say in answer to any question to be taken as any criticism of him. On the contrary, if I had followed his advice about stocks, I might not have suffered the losses which I did. He advised repeatedly against buying the stock I bought but I acted contrary to his advice."

Once, when Ferguson asked him if "20,000 bushels of wheat and 10,000 bushels of oats didn't mean a lot to a Kansas farm boy," Graham responded:

"I've pitched a lot of wheat and oats in Kansas when I was a boy. But they never called them commodities."

Altthough he declared that he left his operations to his broker, both he and Brister declared it was not a "discretionary account."

"When he agreed to help me, I told him I might be out of town, and hoped he would act just as if I were here. He was good enough to do that. I was away on a trip to Brazil for three weeks, and at other times on medical and official trips to Texas and Missouri.

"But when I was here I heard from him. If he advised a purchase or a sale of a commodity. I approaved in whatever amount he recommended, at whatever price he recommended. I am not clear in my mind whether he always spoke to be before or after acting, but it was all the same with me.

"Nobody with whom I worked in the Government and no other Government official or employe ever gave me any information about commodities.

Brister, next to testify, denied Graham's account was what is known as a "discretionary account."

He said it was operated much as Graham had explained, but added:

"Actually you might call it a case of using discretion in handling his account. There's a difference between that and a discretionary accouont," he said, but didn't explain it.

Brister said he didn't recall any conversation with Graham in which the latter told him to get him out of wheat—"that is, not definitely," he added.

At the close of the hearing, Graham as asked if he expected to reopen his account.

"No sirree!" he replied.

Congressional Witnesses' Rights Told

If you are called on to testify before a Congressional committee you may refuse to answer any question only on the ground that by so doing you may incriminate yourself.

But if you are employed in the executive, judicial, or legislative branches, and are subpoenaed to produce papers of those departments you stand a 1000-to-one chance of getting away with a refusal, provided your agency backs you.

These are some of the conclusions in a study entitled "Proceedings Involving Contempt of Congress and Its Committees," prepared by the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress for the Senate Committee on Judiciary.

You may, as a witness, challenge the right of a committee to ask a question on the ground that it is not relevant to the legislative purpose of the inquiry.

That may not stop a committee from citing you for contempt, but if a court later agrees with you that the inquiry was outside the scope of the committee, you'll probably be in the clear.

The study, prepared by Frank Horne of the Federal Law Section of the Legislative Reference Service, was released with a foreword from Chairman Alexander Wiley (R., Wisc.) of the Judiciary Committee, who stated the committee authorized the publication. Horne is a career man of long service with the Congressional Library.

If you are going to claim self-incrimination, which means that you feel an answer would involve you in a legal violation, not merely embarrass, degrade or humiliate you, you should do so in so many words. Even then a committee could force you to answer, but if that happened you would receive complete immunity from prosecution for the crime about which you testified.

The study holds that since the investigatory powers of Congress are derived from the Constitution, "there can be no express constitutional limitations on the exercise of these powers."

"The only general constitutional provision affording an absolute safeguard appears to be the privilege against self-incrimination found in the fifth amendment. However, the constitutional right (fourth amendment) to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures may be protected by a timely application to the proper court," the study said.

"No assumption should be made that, because there are few absolute limitations or protective safeguards, the witness is completely at the mercy of a subcommittee, for its authority and activities are subject not only to review by the courts, but also to review and control of the whole committee as well as the Senate or the House, as the case may be," the memorandum added.

Supreme Court Aid Sought on Alcoa Ruling

By The Associated Press

The Justice Department yesterday asked the Supreme Court to help it enforce a 1945 Circuit Court of Appeals ruling that the Aluminum Co. of America is a monopoly.

The 1945 ruling directed Federal District Court in New York to find that a monopoly existed but instructed the court to wait until the Government had disposed of its wartime aluminum plants before determining whether Alcoa should be dissolved.

Company's Contention

The company contends this judgment grew out of a Government investigation in the 1930's and is now out of date. It has asked the New York District Court to rule that no aluminum monopoly exists under present-day conditions, citing spread of the aluminum industry during the war and post-war years.

The Government is opposing this move, arguing that the District Court can only inquire "as to the measures necessary to dissipate Alcoa's remaining power over an industry illegally dominated by it for more than 25 years."

The action came before the Supreme Court after the Government asked the Second Circuit Court of Appeals, which held Alcoa was a monopoly in 1945, to compel the District Court to comply with that directive. The Circuit Court has said this is a matter for the Supreme Court to decide.

Procedure Unique

The Alcoa trial procedure was unique in the history of American courts, involving these factors:

The Government's Sherman anti-trust law complaint against the company went to trial in the New York District Court in 1940, with the decision against the Government. The Government took a direct appeal to the Supreme Court.

But the Supreme Court never heard the case. The court announced that four of its members, never named, had disqualified themselves from sitting and a quorum could not be obtained for a review.

Congress then adopted a statute authorizing the Second Circuit Court of Appeals in New York to sit as the final court in the case, in place of the Supreme Court.

Army Barge, Small Steamer Face Disaster Off Alaska

Seattle, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—District Coast Guard headquarters reported today that two vessels, with a combined total of 20 to 23 crew members aboard, are threatened with disaster in western Alaskan waters.

The last word from the self-propelled Army barge BSP 1927 was that it "reports less than one hour to stay afloat." It was south of the Alaska peninsula.

The steamer Aleutian Mail, which grounded on Unimak Island yesterday, was reported to have been pulled free by the tides so that it now is adrift with "personnel in danger."

The barge was turning to the aid of the Aleutian Mail when it ran into its own disaster.

How serious was the condition of the Aleutian Mail, with 11 crew members aboard, was not known.

The Coast Guard estimated the two stricken vessels are about 40 miles apart in an era approximately 300 miles west of Kodiak.

Apartment House Fire Routs Six Occupants

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Six occupants of a two-story apartment house were forced to flee the building today by a blaze which two fire companies battled for nearly two hours.

The alarms was sounded when Mrs. Elizabeth C. Sheridan and her daughter, Miss Mildred Sheridan, awoke in their second-floor apartment to find flames bursting from a register. Mr. and Mrs. William E. McDaniels and their two children in another apartment were also forced to leave, clad in their night clothes.

Post Accused of Conspiracy Against Police

City Editor Questioned

Then Ford called up his first defense witness, Ben W. Gilbert, Post city editor, and asked him if he ever had been a member of the Young Communist League or the Communist Party. Prosecutor Gasch objected to this line of questioning, and was upheld by the board. It was at this point that Defense Counsel Ford lashed out at The Washington Post with the charge of "conspiracy."

Earlier, several police witnesses testified that persons arrested here for "investigation"—also known as an "open charge"—were treated differently from formally charged prisoners who may contact counsel, family or bondsman.

Inspector Lloyd A. Truscott, assistant superintendent of police and chief of detectives, testified that in arrests for "investigation" it was the practice of the police department that "no one is notified," unless there is the "express wish for counsel," subject to "modification" by the individual arresting officer or his superior officers.

Asked how long a person arrested for "investigation" may be held by police, Inspector Truscott answered: "The general custom is not too clearly defined . . . it depends on circumstances."

Arrest Policy Outlined

Lieut. Irving Umbaugh of the First Precinct Station, where Clegg was detained in a cell, said in reply to questions concerning policy on arrests for "investigation":

"We would not notify anyone unless it was agreed to by the arresting officer." Lieut. Umbaugh added that it was the practice to treat "investigation" prisoners differently from ordinary arrests.

Pvt. Stephen Betts, who was station clerk at the First Precinct station the evening of August 3, testified he informed Mrs. Clegg when she showed up at the stationhouse at 4 p. m. that day that she could not see her husband unless she got permission from the arresting officer, Private Gibboney.

A fourth policeman, Pvt. Stanley J. Czoper, told the board that on August 3, while inspecting the station cellblock, he was asked by Clegg to call Clegg's home, and that he told Clegg he was not permitted to do so while Clegg was held for "investigation."

Managing Editor on Stand

James Russell Wiggins, managing editor of The Washington Post, was also called to the stand as a witness for the defense. Defense Attorney Ford asked Wiggins to produce the following records:

Payments by the newspaper to Attorney Roger Robb in connection with the Clegg case;

All disbursements for the benefit of Clegg since August 2, 1947.

Expense accounts and payments made to Robert Bruskin, reporter of The Washington Post, relative to the Clegg case.

Employment, absence and attendance data of Clegg on his job.

All payments made to Barton Hickman, former reporter of The Washington Post presently working for Associated Press in Pittsburgh.

Offers to Produce Records

Defense Counsel Ford said he wanted these records to prove "beyond a shadow of doubt" that there was a "conspiracy" by The Washington Post against the police. Prosecutor Gasch objected that all the records, except Clegg's timecards, were immaterial to the hearings. Wiggins offered, nonetheless, to make all the records available as requested. The board ruled, however, that only the time-cards of Clegg would be admitted in evidence.

Also placed into evidence yesterday was the statement to his superior officers made by Private Gibboney, who arrested Clegg.

He was assigned, Gibboney stated, to running down a complaint by two waitresses at Ceres Restaurant, 1309 S st. nw., Miss Viola Haynes, 30 Knight st. se., and Miss Ethel Click, 150 Twelfth st. ne., that they had been molested several mornings around 6 a. m. by a light-skinned colored man, 25 years old, 5 feet 7 or 8, slender build, wearing light tan sport shirt, no sleeves, dark pants. The incidents took place, the women said, after they got off the streetcar at 13th and F sts. nw.

The morning of August 2, Gibboney said, at around 6 a. m., he noticed a light-skinned colored man, about 25, about 5 feet 7 or 8, slender build, white shirt, sleeves rolled to elbows, gray trousers with dark check, and no hat. It was Clegg. Gibboney said he arrested Clegg at the corner of 13th and F sts. nw., when Miss Haynes, then reporting to work at the restaurant, started running as Clegg crossed the street and walked directly behind her. Private Gibboney had been hiding in an areaway.

According to the policeman, Clegg, when arrested, cried: "What's the matter? I didn't say anything to that woman." Gibboney said he took Clegg before Miss Haynes, but that she was not sure Clegg was the morning molester.

Lieutenant Truscott testified that later, on discussing the Clegg case with Private Gibboney, the latter said that he noticed a car coming down 13th st. and believed the approach of the car prevented Clegg from doing what he intended to do. This was not further explained.

Several witnesses yesterday were asked if they had seen any marks on the face and head of Clegg during his detention or shortly thereafter. All the answers were negative. Detective Kapsol and Ennis are accused of hitting Clegg during interrogation after his arrest.

Defense Counsel Ford said he planned to call Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett to the stand during the trial, which resumes at 10 a.m. today in Municipal Building.

Minister Visits Naval Academy

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13 (AP).—Canadian Minister of Defense Brooke Claxton felt at home today when he was welcomed to the Naval Academy in a snowstorm.

He was greeted by Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., superintendent. Accorded a 19-gun salute, the minister also was honored with ruffles and flourishes by the Naval Academy Band.

she received in the mails. One of the missives was handed to her by Laughlin, she said. She will return to the witness stand today. Laughlin told reporters yesterday he had not decided whether he would cross-examine her himself.

Codefendant with Laughlin is Dr. Henry L. Peckham, jr., Southeast Washington physician, who had denied performing the abortion. His counsel has asserted Dr. Peckham merely was called to treat the young woman for illness and did so according to the ethics of the medical profession.

Earlier, defense counsel attacked the credibility of Government witness Gertrude Lillian Ford, 38, an "undergraduate nurse" of 2215 H st. nw., where the Government charges a successful abortion was performed on Mrs. Hobbs last March 22.

Under questioning by Attorneys H. Mason Welch and T. Emmett McKenzie, the witness grew confused about dates, including the times of the alleged visits of Dr. Peckham.

She said she met Mrs. Hobbs, then Miss Pickard, sometime last March at the H st. house. Also present at the time were Laughlin and Mrs. Irma Petrain, a nurse with whom Miss Ford lives.

She said the group left and returned about two hours later. Miss Ford testified that Mrs. Hobbs stayed over that night, became ill the next day and that the following day Dr. Peckham arrived.

The witness said Peckham and Mrs. Hobbs were in the bedroom alone while she, Laughlin and Mrs. Petrain had coffee down stairs.

She declared a scream was heard coming from Mrs. Hobbs' room and that she then observed, "Well, everything is over now."

Capehart Proposes Freezing All Prices

Clash Provoked When Schwellenbach Declares Such a Plan Is Unworkable

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

A Senate committee yesterday saw the novel, although confusing, spectacle of:

1. A Republican businessman, turned Senator, damning a Democtoin proposal as too weak, half-hearted and ineffectual.

2. A Democratic Cabinet member condemning the Senator's alternate proposal—a blanket freeze of all prices—as too farreaching and administratively unworkable.

The Senator was Capehart (R., Ind.) and the Cabinet member was Schwellenbach, Secretary of Labor. The scene was the Senate Finance Committee, hearing testimony on the last of President Truman's 10 points for inflatoin control—the power to apply price control and rationing.

Noisy and Bitter at Times

The Capehart - Schwellenbach fight—which grew at times to a noisy and bitter affair—was provoked by Schwellenbach's refusal to name any specific commodity on which price ceilings would be set.

The Labor Secretary was testifying in favor of a bill granting power to impose "selective" price controls. Capehart wanted to know what would be selected.

Items that were in short supply, at too high prices, that affected the cost of living or the cost of producing goods, Schwellenbach answered.

Wasn't everything too high and wasn't everything in short supply, Capehart wanted to know. Be specific, he demanded again and again; what items would you control?

Decision Rests Elsewhere

Schwellenbach insisted he was not going to name any, since the decisions rested with other departments—Commerce, Interior and Agriculture.

"You confuse me, the Nation, and this Congress when you talk about selective controls and then don't know a single commodity where you would impose price ceilings immediately," he said.

"Are we trying to give the people relief or not? All the prices are too high, and yet you want to select some to control . . . If you can't say 'This particular price is too high', what's the good of the bill?

"I question whether they (the Administration) are as serious about controlling prices as they'd like to have us believe."

No Monkey-Business

Schwellesbach replied: "If you think there is any monkey-business or fooling about this bill, you're mistaken."

He insisted that Capehart's line of questioning was unfair, that the Senator was drawing unwarranted inferences from his answers and was putting words in his mouth.

Capehart said he apologized if he had been unmannerly, but asked, "as a United States Senator don't I have the right to ask what commodities you consider too high and should be rolled back?"

Could Work Out Details

His own bill, Capehart argued, would provide the necessary relief in that it would freeze all prices at once. Then, Congress and the Administration would work out whatever detailed program was necessary. But meantime, there would be a stop to inflation.

"Utterly impracticable," said Schwellenbach. It would mean policing every grocery store. It would take six months to create the required organization. It would be simply impossible to set up a machine that would work.

How could you pass a law that no one could sell over a set price and expect to see it observed," Schwellenbach asked.

Reflect Lack of Confidence

Most people would observe it, and insofar as they did, it would provide relief, Capehart said. Doubts as to its observance merely reflected lack of confidence in the American people, he added.

"I have as much confidence in the American people as you," Schwellenbach snorted.

Earlier, in a prepared statement, Schwellenbach had stressed an argument not previously emphasized in Administration appeals for the price control bill. This was that since the key parts of American industry are already working at capacity, further higher prices will not produce any more goods in the short run, but only inflation.

He cited meat, wheat, steel, oil and coal as illustrations of his point.

Today, the testimony for price control is schedulded to be continued before the Senate Finance Committee by Interior Secretary Krug (10 a. m.) and Commerce Secretary Harriman (2:30 p. m.).

Biggest gun in the battle, however, will be fired by the President himself, whose Economic Report goes to Congress at noon.

It is expected to contain a restatement of his program of fighting inflation, and analyses of the inflationary forces.

Dresden Rent Hike Favored

Rent increases averaging 7.36 per cent for the Dresden Apartments, 2126 Connecticut ave. nw., have been recommended by an examiner for the Office of Administration of Rent Control in the District.

The B. F. Saul Co. had asked for rent increases totaling $10,077 in the apartment's 61 units, which represented an average increase of 14.7 per cent.

The total increases recommended by Denis K. Lane, the examiner, total $5049. Rents which have ranged from $35 a month for three rooms and bath to $175 a month for nine rooms and three baths will run from $37.50 to $187.50 under the recommendation.

In another case heard yesterday, the request of Lofton S. Wesley for permission to increase by $3.50 a month the board charges paid by rooomers and boarders of Wesley Hall, 1426 21st st. nw., was taken under advisement by Ernest F. Williams, general counsel of the rent control office.

WANTED A GOVERNMENT GIRL FOR MARY WORTH
$300 IN PRIZES!
$200 to winner
$50 to runner-up
10 prizes of $5 each
NATIONAL FAME AS A MODEL!
$200 . . . plus
9-day trip to BERMUDA to the winner of this contest

HERE'S good news for all government girls—and wonderful news for one girl in particular.

The famous Mary Worth—the comic strip lady who holds together the episodes of the various glamour girls in The Washington Post's Mary Worth comic—is coming to Washington (not in real life, of course, but in the comic strip).

She will meet a government girl. And just as she got mixed into Elissa Lake's romance with Harvey Saxton by getting a job in a department store, so Mary Worth will become involved in the daily lives of government girls in Washington. All over the country newspaper readers will be following this comic strip story of Washington's girls (with The Washington Post's own Jerry Kluttz serving as technical advisor for accuracy!) America will get new insight, a fresh, sympathetic understanding, of the problems of the girls who help keep our government running.

One government girl, in particular, will be the focus of all eyes. Ken Ernst, the artist who draws the strip, will use an actual government girl as the model for his pen-and-ink heroine. And The Washington Post is going to help make the selection by holding a contest. It starts right now. First prize is $200, given by The Washington Post, plus a 9-day, expenses-paid trip to Bermuda by the World-Wide Travel Service Corp., Colonial Airlines and Hotel Bermudiana. Eleven runners-up also get cash prizes.

Here are the rules. Read them now and make up your mind to enter. Someone will win. Someone will get the $200 and the fun and excitment of being in the spotlight. It might as well be you!

The Washington Post

Here are the RULES!

1. The Mary Worth government girl contest is designed to select a model government girl upon whom the artist of the Mary Worth strip will base the drawing of the heroine of his government girl episode.
2. All girls employed by the United States government in the metropolitan Washington area are eligible to compete.
3. Entries shall consist of photographs only, one photograph from each entrant, the photograph to be not more than one year old at the time of entry.
4. Any kind of black and white picture (no color shots or tints) may be entered, including snapshots, but be sure to get one that does you justice and is big enough for the judges to see what you look like.
5. Pictures must be entered unmounted. No frame, no glass.
6. The Washington Post will make all reasonable effort to return photographs but accepts no responsibility for their return.
7. Each photograph must be accompanied by a slip of paper PASTED to the bottom of the photograph, carrying the following information, typed or printed: Name, local address, age, home address, type of work, government office in which employed, plus signature. (For convenience, The Washington Post will publish a form every day which can be used as an entry blank.)
8. Winner will be used as a model for the comic strip, will receive $200 in cash and a trip to Bermuda. Runner-up gets $50 in cash, next ten get $5 each.
9. Decision of the judges will be final. There will be no correspondence of any kind in regard to individual entries.
10. Contest runs from January 7 through January 28. Entries postmarked later than January 28 will not be considered.
11. By entering the contest, the entrant binds herself to accept these rules and conditions as here stated.

Through going over the rules? Then what are you waiting for? Don't be modest—remember, this isn't a beauty contest, but a search for a model for Mary Worth's Government Girl. Look over Ken Ernst's previous heroines—Elissa, Brick, Crystal, Pixie. All different, weren't they? Maybe you are the type that Ken Ernst is looking for next! What do you have to lose? And $200 to win! Get out your photos now, look them over, make your selections, fill out the entry blank, and MAIL IT IN. Be sure to protect the photo with cardboard and mark the envelope "PHOTO—DO NOT BEND." Address Contest Department, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C.

USE THIS CONVENIENT ENTRY BLANK OR TYPE THE INFORMATION ON ANY SLIP OF PAPER AND PASTE TO BOTTOM OF PHOTOGRAPH.

End of 'Live' Music On Radio Foreseen

A leader in the radio industry told a Congress committee yesterday he was "pessimistic" about the continued appearance of "live musicians" on the networks after the end of this month.

President Justin Miller of the National Association of Broadcasters said he was not hopeful about prospects of a new contract with James Caesar Petrillo, czar of the American Federation of Musicians. The present contract expires January 31.

The stations could still play records, but Miller did not know where they would be able to get any musicians to perform in the flesh.

From New York, however, the Associated Press yesterday quoted "industry circles" as believing that the musicians would be allowed to stay on the job, pending negotiations, even though the contracts lapse.

Petrillo is due to appear today in Federal Court in New York to hear the verdict on his trial of violating the Lea Act. That law forbids the coercion of radio stations to employ more musicians than they need.

The House Labor Committee is studying that law and the Taft-Hartley Act, with reference to the musicians union. The purpose of the inquiry is to see whether further legislation is necessary, Representative Hartley (R., N. J.), committee chairman, said.

Miller, the first witness, called Petrillo an "economic tyrant," in dictatorial control of an outfit that wasn't even a trade union, much less a democratic one.

Overtime Hit For Reporters

By The Associated Press

Cranston Williams, general manager of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, contended yesterday news writers and reporters came under the Taft Hartley Act definition of "professional" workers and therefore should be ineligible to receive time and a half pay for work past 40 hours weekly.

Countering this argument, Sam Eubanks, executive vice president of the CIO American Newspaper Guild, said in a statement prepared for Wage-Hour Administration hearings, that all professional, executive and administrative personnel receiving less than $500 a month should be paid overtime rates for time worked after 40 hours weekly.

The $500 limit first was advocated at the start of the hearings a month ago by the CIO United Electrical Workers.

The wage-hour administrator is considering changes in present regulations. These provide time and a half pay for hours in excess of 40 hours weekly, but exempt executives earning more than $30 weekly and professional and administrative employes receiving more than $200 monthly. Other job tests also are provided in classifying employes.

Charges Fly In GSI Strike

Bad weather hampered picketing at 40 struck GSI cafeterias yesterday, but it didn't stop the daily charges and countercharges flung by management and union alike.

Company officials reiterated claims of near-normal service and crumbling picket lines; the union maintained that GSI service is falling short and that 95 per cent of the regular employes are determined not to return to work.

At the same time, three Government employes filed a suit in District Court for a temporary injunction against continued operation of the cafeterias by GSI. The suit charged the corporation is failing in its contract with the Government "to maintain a high standard of cleanliness, order and efficient service at all times."

The petition was filed for Roy M. Patterson, 6132 N. 12th st., Arlington; Allan Searle, 1343 Saratoga ave. ne., and Ralph Russell, 15 W. Washington st., Kensington, Md.

J. C. Niehuss, GSI personnel director, said "close to 70,000 Government workers," about 10,000 fewer than normal, are being served "practically full" menus daily.

Niehuss objected to a statement Monday by Representative Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.) that GSI "has never placed a Negro worker in a supervisory, managerial or even in a cashier's position."

Said Niehuss: "We have always had one or two Negro supervisors, wherever there was a predominantly colored patronage."

Early Bird U. S. Consul Causes Convict Capture

Southampton, England, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Because American Consul Willard Calder gets to work early, an escaped convict is back in jail today.

Calder, arriving at his office at 7 a. m., saw a man on the roof of a nearby building. He dialed police, who arrested Frederick Wells, 34, who escaped from Winchester Prison yesterday.

Bus Fare Fight Centers on Cost To Children

Baltimore, Jan. 13 (AP).—Increased costs of school children's transportation resulting from a proposed Capital Transit Co. rate hike in Maryland came in for major attention at a Public Service Commission hearing today.

The Washington utility is asking for an increase that would add an estimated $450,000 to its Maryland revenues but would not, the company says, lift its Free State operations out of the red.

Dean J. Locke, staff engineer of Capital Transit, acknowledged under cross-examination that the fares of some school children commuting on the Prince Georges County lines may be doubled.

The company wants to put all its Maryland bus and trolley fares on a cash basis of 5 cents per 1½-mile zones, without any special reduction for school children.

The general raise in fares requested for the Prince Georges group of lines would range from 65 per cent to 118 per cent on the Greenbelt line.

As for the school children, Locke said that those paying 4.2 cents now would have to pay a nickel if their ride fell within the proposed 1½-mile cash zone, and 10 cents if they were carried across zone boundaries.

He acknowledged, too, that on the Beltsville to Branchville and Mount Rainier line, children who now pay about 8 cents per trip from Beltsville to Mount Rainier on a monthly ticket would have to spend 25 cents per trip.

But by and large, Locke insisted, the proposed system will "reduce the transport cost of school children in Prince Georges County."

Views of Montgomery County citizens on the company plan were presented for the first time today in the long-drawn hearing by Albert Conradis, county public utilities counsel.

He said he was primarily interested in pupils' rates, seeking if possible a special reduction for them.

A prolonged attempt by Gregory Hankin, attorney for Prince Georges County residents and former member of the District of Columbia Public Utilities Commission, to challenge company figures on revenue resulting from its Maryland operations, was another highlight of today's session.

candidates for Fire Chief prior to Murphy's appointment)—who testified Murphy used abusive language against Werheim.

On another charge, two firemen testified that last February 15 a rescue squad ambulance was dispatched at Murphy's request for an unidentified "friend" who had a dislocated thumb. Both witnesses said they were advised to "keep quiet" about the incident, but said the ambulance was technically "in service" at the time through radio contact. Normally there would be no record of such a call, they said.

It was at a hearing before Beall's subcommittee that the Murphy trial had its origin when Fire Capt. Joseph W. Conroy charged his chief with demoralizing the department. Beall made it clear yesterday the subcommittee wants to see both the trial transcript and the "suppressed" report of an investigation of the charges by the Corporation Counsel's office.

A member of Beall's subcommittee is Representative Homer Jones (R., Wash.), who conferred with House District Committee Chairman Everett Dirksen (R., Ill.) early last month about possible release of the Corporation Counsel's report.

Manila ran low on fuel and went in to Palmyra Island.

The experience did something else for her husband, Mrs. Hopkins interjected. "He's not picky about his food any more," she said. "He'll eat anything you put before him."

The stranded trio existed on 10 days' rations and rain water during their adventure. "Then we caught a shark," Hopkins related. "Shark steak and filet is as good as white meat on chicken."

Hopkins hopes to get himself a land-based job shortly and to settle down to a "quiet home life."

"I've stretched my luck far enough," he murmured.

Without Painful Backache
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Yours in 48 hours —
New power for your BUICK!
Today's Power, Today's Performance, Today's Zip —for Buicks up to Ten Years Old!
MAYBE this sounds too good to be true. But it's a fact!
Even if your Buick dates back as far as 1937, you can have a hoodful of factory-fresh Fireball power—a sleek new power plant that's the same as the engines going into the latest Buick cars.
Everything about it is brand-new. A new carburetor and air cleaner help make every drop of fuel give up all its power. A new distributor, complete with vacuum and centrifugal advance, puts new snap in your get-away and new pep in all driving. A whole new wiring harness prevents electrical loss. And tucked in the flywheel housing is a new smoothie of a clutch that'll make driving more fun than ever.
Yes, it's all new, with the latest Buick engine features you read about—like precision cylinder boring, Oil-Miser rings, Stratoflow cooling and so on.
You can get a new engine like this because engine production is not held back by the shortage of sheet steel which limits complete-car production.
So we're able to put one of these honeys into your car and make it young again—give it new power and performance that will get you set for thousands and thousands more carefree miles.
How much does it cost? Not nearly what you'd expect—often less than a comprehensive overhaul. And it's a mighty good investment because it makes your car worth so much more when it comes time to turn it in.
Nice proposition, isn't it? Surely worth talking over. Won't you come in and let us give you all the details?

Sales-Tax Budget

We do not see how any citizen who conscientiously reviews the District's fiscal problem can avoid the conclusion that enactment of a local sales tax will be necessary. The District Commissioners have trimmed more than 42 million dollars from the requests of local department heads. Their budget totals $101,464,783, an increase of nearly 6 millions over the appropriation for the current year. Yet it leaves various District agencies and institutions on an austerity basis. Nothing is allowed for new school buildings, although $4,335,683 is allocated for completion of 11 school projects now under way. Construction funds urgently requested by the Health Department were slashed from $5.058,790 to $640,000. The welfare budget was virtually cut in half. Still the sales tax is necessary to balance the District budget thus stripped below what many citizens believe to be the bare essentials.

Hope that the income tax might be made a source of substantial revenue has all but disappeared because of the refusal of Congress to recast the District's income-tax law on an equitable basis. Even the fairest proposals to tax Government employes living here and maintaining their legal domicile in the States have been rejected. Consequently only a small proportion of local residents pay this tax. The sales tax thus seems to be the only untapped source from which any substantial amount of revenue can be derived.

We have previously suggested that, considering its phenomenal growth of population in recent years, the District ought to be financing some of its capital improvements through bond issues. The pay-as-you-go system is admirable so long as there is reasonably steady growth. But when new population suddenly overwhelms a city, as is the case with Washington, it is virtually impossible to finance the required public improvements from current income. With the Auchincloss plan now in the offing, however, the question of local bond issues will doubtless have to be postponed until Congress approves or rejects the proposed new charter for the District. The Auchincloss-Ball bill now before both houses of Congress would give a city council for the District authority to issue long-term bonds to finance capital improvements with approval by three fourths of the councilmen and a majority of the people in a referendum.

Meanwhile we are glad that the Commissioners are seeking funds to bring the police force up to a strength of 2000 men (still 500 short of the figure recommended by the FBI), to hire additional teachers, building inspectors and nurses at Gallinger Hospital. Funds to inaugurate the work of the Redevelopment Land Agency are certainly essential, and the same may be said for the major highway improvements included in the budget. Criticism of the budget, we suspect, will center chiefly on its omissions, and, of course, these deficiencies can be overcome only to the extent that additional funds can be raised.

Survival In The Air Age

If the report of the President's Air Policy Commission released today seems disproportionately weighted on the side of military aviation, it is because that is the area in which the national security is most vulnerable. The report is the fruition of five months of exhaustive study by a group of five distinguished private citizens headed by Thomas K. Finletter. It is altogether the most comprehensive survey in modern aviation history. Much of what it says is not new, but correlation of relevant facts in one document makes the sum bluntly compelling. The primary lesson the report seeks to impart, military-wise, is that there must be a new strategic concept for the defense of the United States, a concept based on air power, and that this concept is not now given the recognition, in terms of preparation, that it must have

The report does not gild the facts. It admits, for example, that 85 per cent of the Federal budgets since 1915 have been for war preparation or payment, and that the program it recommends will be even more expensive. It recognizes, too, that there can be no such thing as absolute security until war itself "is abolished under a regime of law." The report, then, has to fall back on what might be called relative security—that is to say, measures of military preparedness. These are divided into two parts: first, for the period during which this country has a monopoly on atomic weapons, which the report estimates will extend to 1952, and, second, for the period thereafter in which instantaneous atomic attack on the United States will be possible. For the first phase, the report says, the Air Force is inadequate; for the second phase, in which the stress will be on violent counter-offensive, the Air Force is "hopelessly wanting."

As an immediate step the survey calls for a minimum regular Air Force of 70 groups of 6869 first-line planes, a 27-group Air National Guard with 3212 first-line planes, and a 34-group Air Reserve. In addition there must be a reserve of 8100 modern aircraft by 1952. Naval aviation the report regards as adequate now, provided there are funds for replacement of obsolescent planes. In this connection it seems to us that there is some justification for criticism that the report underplays the strategic importance of Naval aviation, although it does recognize that the first burden in an offensive will fall on carrier aviation until forward bases have been secured.

The commission recommends an increase in the military budget from the present figure of 10 billion dollars to more than 13 billions in calendar 1949, with the increase directed specifically toward building up the air arm. It calls for such economies as the merger of the Air Transport Command and the Naval Air Transport Service, but emphasizes that these economies cannot substitute for increased expenditures. One noteworthy suggestion is that there be a biennial review of the military establishment by five private citizens reporting to the President. Concurrently the commission calls attention to the present lack of an over-all strategic plan with respect to the Air Force and Naval aviation—a deficiency stemming no doubt from the newness of unification but one which demands immedate correction.

The situation the Air Policy Commission points up is so critical, we believe, that no one who recognizes the danger that stalks an unprepared nation in the atomic age can quarrel with the military objectives the report seeks. Nor can there be serious disagreement over its concern with an adequate plan for industrial mobilization, including long-range aircraft procurement to stabilize aircraft manufacturing. The commission shows proper appreciation of the importance of aeronautical research, noting that the biggest trouble is lack of qualified personnel. As a corollary to giving a high priority to education in the aeronautical sciences, the commission reiterates the suggestion often made in other connections, namely, that capable men could be attracted by raising the Government salary ceiling.

The principal controversy over the Air Policy Commission report is likely to arise from its two concluding sections on civil aviation and Government organization, especially the latter. Basically, the commission tends to regard mail pay subsidies as the means of promoting airline self-sufficiency. Consequently, it does not stress what we believe is a need for continual review of operating efficiency of route certificate holders in the public interest. It is encouraging, however, to have the commission observe that Government expenditure for electronic aids to air traffic control, navigation and landing will do "more than anything else" to promote self-sufficiency. The commission also takes what we consider a proper stand on the need for giving the Civil Aeronautics Board economic control over contract carriers, on the inadvisability of the "chosen instrument" and on the importance of multilateral pacts on the "fifth freedom" of the air.

In calling for absorption of the Civil Aeronautics Authority in a new Department of Civil Aviation in the Commerce Department, the commission takes note of the present anomaly as between the functions of the CAA and CAB. Likewise, in recommending a separate Air Safety Board, the commission endeavors to streamline the judicial work of the CAB. However, the suggeseion that there be a Secretary of Civil Aviation of equal status with a Secretary of Industry and Trade, both of non-Cabinet rank under the Secretary of Commerce, seems to us to be a debasement of the currency. There is no valid reason why the structure of civil aviation must parallel that of the military, or why the importance of civil aviation cannot be recognized without a plethora of secretaries. The ultimate aim of a department of transportation, which the report mentions, is in itself laudable; but it could work severe hardship against civil aviation without more safeguards than have been listed.

The controversial points in the commission survey however, by no means detract from its value as a textbook for national air policy. The report is must reading not only for persons concerned directly with aviation problems but also for members of Congress if they are to deal intelligently with the paramount question of survival in the air age.

GSI Strike

The position of GSI in the cafeteria workers' strike would be much stronger if it had not also refused to negotiate with its workers last year when the reasons which it now gives for such an action did not exist. Last year there was no Taft-Hartley law, no issue of non-Communist affidavits.

The action of GSI in refusing to even discuss the basic economic issues involved may conceivably increase the hold upon the workers of their union leaders. The workers know that for several years the union has been their only defense against GSI's annual refusal, on some pretext or other, to make wage adjustments for its lower-paid employes.

If GSI wishes to break the hold of questionable leaders, it could best do so by working out a fair compromise with the workers' present elected spokesmen (thereby in no way violating the Taft-Hartley law) and then encouraging it workers to elect officers whose qualification is above question. GOVERNMENT WORKER.
Washington.

It is said that GSI in its attempt to crack the strike of the cafeteria workers, is resorting to tactics that would be employed nowhere else in the Nation. Several workers who are normally employed in the recreation division of GSI have been told that unless they work in the place of the strikers they might not have a job next summer. These people are being drafted against their will and will become marked men and women by all self-respecting labor in the future.

GSI started off as a voluntary association of Government department heads to serve Government workers but has grown into a huge business, a self-contained and self-perpetuating monopoly. Isn't it time that Congress provided a Government-controlled agency to operate or sublet to private industry? The threat to workers employed in the recreation field to work as strike-breakers or lose their jobs is vicious.

"Military CAB"

Your views on the Landis ouster have been splendid. The appointment of Maj. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter is amazing, to say the least. If he is as important to the Air Force as his title indicates, how can the Air Force "loan" him to the Civil Aeronautics Board for six years?

For President Truman to complain of the dearth of capable men for top Government positions at Government ceilings after offering no explanation for the failure to reappoint one of the most outstanding and best qualified lawyers and administrators in this country is bad enough. But to nominate a military successor who is not familiar with civilian air problems and to ask Congress to pass special legislation so that the new chairman can receive military pay ($15,144 against the usual $10,000) and also remain a general while being a civilian is insulting. This general is certainly eating his cake and having it too.

Fair-minded citizens should protest this nomination to their Senators.

Taft on ERP

The blast by Senator Taft at President Truman's program is an attempt to ridicule the Marshall Plan and other good suggestions. Senator Taft says it would put the United States in the role of Santa Claus. That puts Senator Taft in the role of "Grandfather Frost," the Communist Santa Claus.

J. P.
Baltimore.

Senator Taft refuses to admit that there is a world crisis; his interest is purely in our local economy and in the success of his program. In a world of atom bombs, guided missiles and of acceptance of the principles of world cooperation, his viewpoint would be laughable if it were not so terribly dangerous.

Whatever action is taken by the Administration or by Congress as distinct from the Administration must be related, not to the effect it will produce in the United States but to the effect it will have in the world economy and political position. To take a viewpoint characterized by the most suicidal type of economic, social and political thinking in the face of what we must all recognize as world forces is to invite disaster; to attempt to sell the American people this, after one great war has been fought, is nothing less than insulting.

White House Balcony

It is regrettable that twice within the same Administration a proposal is being made for changes in the White House which must be protested by all those who pay the consideration due one of our greatest architectural heritages.

One of the finest views in Washington is looking north from the Ellipse to the White House, when the south sunshine creates such beautiful shadows from the majestic columns of the portico, falling on the curved wall behind them. And now it is proposed to build a porch at the second floor level which will project from the wall to within a very few inches of the columns, creating two sets of deep shadows and ruining the dignity of the tall columns. It also seems that the pediments over the first story windows will have to go as the floor of the balcony must cut across them.

The White House is owned by the American people and is "rented" out to different people of their choice from time to time. Any changes the tenants may wish to make to the structure obviously cannot be referred to the owners each time. Therefore a group of professionals, persons who know, was set up by Congress as an advisory body to whom all such matters are to be referred. This body is the Commission of Fine Arts and in this case it is opposed to the changes. And yet for reasons which seem a bit trivial the present tenant is willing to ignore the advice of the legal body set up as advisory custodians. The only recourse now left is the force of public opinion.

WILLIAM DEWEY FOSTER.

Middle Ground For China

As one who finds your excellent newspaper a heartening example of all that is meant by, though rarely encountered in, the "free press," I am writing to thank you for the many fine editorials expressing your beliefs on the question of aid to China now.

It puzzles me greatly to note that the most ardent and most powerfully vocal protagonists of immediate aid to China, i. e., Mr. Bullitt and Representative Judd, are unwilling to consider any middle-ground solution to the Chinese problem—far less any Chinese solution. Why do they insist upon drawing the picture—starkly extreme—as being a choice between the present Chinese government and complete communism? It seems to me that they postulate their entire case upon the hypothesis that China must be dominated either by the United States or by Russia; that if we fail to step into the breach, Russia will take over.

This hypothesis is, however, extremely doubtful. How do Mr. Bullitt and Representative Judd refute your repeatedly stated belief that this cannot be done, China cannot be dominated, by either the United States or by Russia? Do they not consider there is even the slightest reason to hope that the Chinese might, if left alone, struggle through to some sort of moderate, nontotalitarian government of their own choosing?

Mr. Judd's monotonous and specious comparisons of the situation in China with that in the countries of Europe—where the popular governments, under the impetus of the Marshall Plan, and with the support of their people, will deal with Communist threats in their own fashion—seem to me to cloud the issue and confuse the sentiments. I cannot believe that Mr. Judd does not know better. His motives for denying what intellectually he must realize can only be explained on an emotional ground (as suggested by the penetrating Washington Post column recently by Andre Visson).

But even such an explanation, while helping us to make allowances for Mr. Judd's obsessive attitude, does not seem to me a rational basis for legislation appropriating millions for China, and the ademocratic policy which is thus impetuously launched. Surely Mr. Judd's naive belief that by propping up a rotten, helpless and unpopular regime in China we shall succeed in turning the people of China away from communism is either childlike or deliberately misleading. By such a policy, we shall instead turn the people of China implacably, and I fear dangerously, against ourselves.

As for Mr. Bullitt, whose views, by a staggering coincidence, are identical with those of Mr. Henry Luce on China—let him unmask and defend the concept of American imperialism which underlies his eloquent appeals to Americans to save China from the Red menace. I do not believe that Mr. Bullitt is as haunted by fear of the Red menace as he would have us believe; but if he is, then he has no place as a molder of American public opinion (which place he usurps through magazine articles of wide circulation and radio speeches), or as counsel to American policy-makers, at a time when clear and honest thinking is the prerequisite both of our leaders and of our citizens.

If, as I suspect, he does not believe in his self-created specter, then I, for one, deeply resent his use of the fear technique to try to scare Americans into a course of action toward the potentially explosive Orient which could have only disastrous results upon those same Americans.

I should like to remind both Mr. Bullitt and Mr. Judd that we Americans are—or so we allege—fundamentally guardians of democracy. As such, therefore, our consistent policy must be twofold:

(1) In all dealings, to practice with undeviating devotion the principles of democracy; and (2) in international dealings, to support and encourage, not totalitarianism—whether Communist or Fascist—but government of the people, by the people, and for the people.

If we fail in this responsibility, our words will sound, in fact, with a hollow ring through the world; and our actions will rightly be regarded with suspicion by all nations.

Fashion Omens For Politicos

By Malvina Lindsay

'New Look' Thinking

POLITICAL leaders trying to foresee the trend of the country's thinking might do well to cast an eye on the spring fashion showings this week in New York. These indicate that the "new look," which created such a stir last fall, is settling down into what seems to be a major fashion cycle of the type known as "romantic." It is also said to be influencing men's attire in minor details, another sign it is here to stay.

Clothes of this type, believe some students of cycles, usually go with eras of conservatism and convention, with nice quiet times in which nobody starts a revolution, reformers are not too active, and women keep their place. These eras even have a connection with peace, believes Capt. Liddell Hart, British military analyst.

Captain Hart recently hailed the "new look" as a contented look, which in the past usually reflected an atmosphere of peace. Women's return to broad hips, accented bosoms and waistlines, he maintained, was a sign the "human temper was returning to normal."

FASHIONS are like the Bible, in that almost anything can be proved by them. The last big romantic age of fashion was not exactly peaceful in this country, as it ran through the Mexican and Civil wars. But it is also true that the tube silhouette in women's styles has more often accompanied war and revolution.

Even more strikingly, waves of social and even political thinking have at times alternated on the same time schedule as major cycles in the feminine silhouette, which run about three to a century. One reason for this may be that it takes about a generation for people to tire of either beliefs or silhouettes.

The great revolt of youth, which reached its climax in the 1920s, was gathering steam during the tubular cycle of fashion of the early nineteenth century. This cycle significantly had begun in the gay 90s about the time women were beginning to get out of hand. And women made their big and final push for the vote while wearing tube skirts.

Jumping back a century to a previous reign of the tube silhouette, we find that in the early 1800s there was much complaint about wild youth and immodest, aggressive women. But this period was succeeded by the development of the genteel female, who in billowing skirts and wasp waist held sway for many decades.

Hence those disturbed today over the increasing demands of women that their sex get more offices in State and national government are keeping their fingers crossed and depending on the "new look" to make women more "contented."

THERE IS some ground for their hopes in the way women have been going in for marriage, children and homemaking. Also women have been losing representation in Congress and State Legislatures, and in policy-making positions. And a wave of longing for the past has been sweeping through feminine circles. Yet this also has been running through men's circles. No one can deny the strength of the good-old-days psychology that followed the end of the war.

There is also growing emphasis on formality and convention, a swing away from realism in fiction, and increasing interest in religion. Cynics say the corset and the creed always return together. Some would add to these status quo politics.

If this theory holds, Henry Wallace need not expect a big vote in November. Yet it should not be forgotten that the present Republican Party was born when women were wearing 10-yard skirts over hoops, and dresses with drooping shoulders. In fact, one school of thought holds that when there is social and political change brewing women always wear ultra feminine styles in a subconscious retreat from new challenges.

Employe Investigations

According to congressional action during the past few months, civilian employes of the Government are being investigated (1) to assure their loyalty, (2) to determine their use of annual and sick leave, and (3) to find whether they are loafing on the job.

What action is proposed to assure the loyalty of military personnel? An officer gets 30 days leave a year; so long as he reports for duty in the morning, he can take off the remainder of the day without touching his leave. He can take as much sick leave as he wishes. What steps have been taken to determine how much they loaf on the job? Their salaries and retirement benefits are much more substantial than those of civilian employes.

Who has ever investigated the loyalty of our elected representatives? Some former Congressmen and Senators belonged to organizations that today are recognized as subversive. There is no restriction on their use of leave. They have voted increases in their salaries, and have provided retirement benefits that outshine even those given Army and Navy officers. Who has investigated the use of funds appropriated for the multiple investigating committees, or the practice of padding the pay rolls with relatives?

Civilian employes of the Government, as a group, are no more disloyal, no more prone to take advantage of privileges, and no less needy insofar as salaries and retirement benefits are concerned than members of Congress or military personnel. Yet, they ride the caboose on the Government train.

STEWART L. CHAPPELL.
Washington.

Administering ERP

Representative Herter's letter on the opposite page makes a valuable contribution to the debate on what sort of agency should administer the European Recovery Program. He challenges our editorial of January 7 in which we expressed the belief that his bill for the granting of aid to Europe would involve an unconstitutional delegation of authority. These different viewpoints stem, however, solely from differing interpretations of what the bill means.

Relying upon the language of the Herter bill, we assumed that the "independent agency of the United States" which it would create is intended to become the policy-making body for the European Recovery Program. That authority, with its bipartisan board of directors and its direct mandate from Congress, seemed to us to have the earmarks of a quasi-legislative agency. It is true that some Federal units of Government with bipartisan boards set up by statute, such as the RFC and the Export-Import Bank, are under general supervision by the President. But the great majority are not: FTC, ICC and so on. They operate to carry out legislative policy without interference from the White House, and the President is unable to remove their members, except for specified misbehavior in office.

Mr. Herter says in his letter that he has no thought of creating such an organization to administer the European Recovery Program. "The Herter bill," he says, "does not in any way seek to limit the President's control." This is of great significance. We readily agree that if the President's power to control this aspect of our foreign policy would remain unimpaired, then the objection to the bill on constitutional grounds would have to be withdrawn. But we do not think that this intent on the part of Representative Herter has been made clear in the bill as it stands.

If there is no intention to limit the President's control, moreover, why encumber the administrative agency with a bipartisan policy-making board? Mr. Herter refers to the proposed foreign aid council including the Secretaries of State, Treasury, National Defense, Agriculture and Commerce which would consult with the President on the recovery programs to be set up abroad. But this council could give advice only. The real power "to determine, prescribe and conclude the arrangements" under which the program would operate would be given to the bipartisan board of the "independent agency." As a practical matter, the President can control foreign policy only through his Secretary of State, who under the Herter bill would appear to be little more than a cipher in the determination of policy in this most vital aspect of foreign relations. If, therefore, the Herter bill escapes the charge of unconstitutionality by recognizing the power of the President to direct our foreign relations, it impales itself on the other horn of the dilemma by providing an unworkable means of achieving its aim.

We hope that Congress will accept Mr. Herter's view as to the bill's intent and revise it so as to make possible an effective exercise of the President's constitutional function. Surely this purpose cannot be realized by lodging the real power over the European Recovery Program in a bipartisan board! As an advisory body, a bipartisan board could doubtless serve a very useful purpose. But actual policy decisions, in our opinion, ought to be kept very close to the Secretary of State. Fortunately, the country has in Secretary Marshall a man who has demonstrated great capacity for delegating authority to carry out decisions once they have been made. For the purpose of operating the program, therefore, an agency outside of the State Department could be effectively used.

There is much disagreement as to just what the relationship of this agency to the State Department should be, and it is encouraging to note that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is giving careful attention to this problem. But certainly presidential control over the program ought to be maintained through the Department of State. Otherwise the President's role in the direction of the Nation's foreign relations would be reduced to a shadow.

French Fears

Andre Geraud, who writes under the name of Pertinax, said in a recent article in Foreign Affairs, "The French are compelled to put on record their impression that directly they take a step away from Russia and in the direction of the Western powers, the manners of the Western powers become blunter." As if to confirm "Pertinax" comes the news of the Anglo-American establishment of an economic government for western Germany; the French apparently were not consulted beforehand. Surely our first object in Germany must be to try to transform Bizonia into Trizonia: that is to say, to induce the French to join their zone with the zones of Britain and America. Such a union is not brought nearer by ignoring the French in the important matter of economic organization.

We are convinced that the French fear that this economic "government" is the forerunner of a highly centralized Germany is entirely without foundation. But, as Secretary Marshall told the House committee, fear of a risen Germany is a fact in France, and must be taken into account. And, in view of Franco-German history, it is understandable. It was the French feeling that at the Moscow Conference the British and United States delegations approved the principle of a federated Germany with powers given to a central authority which would be both specific and limited. To be sure, as long as Soviet Russia and France refuse to treat Germany as an economic unit, something must be done in the British and American zones to arrest deterioration and promote recovery. But the German future need not be prejudiced by any short-circuiting of the state parliaments in setting up a bizonal economic council.

Whether or not the German future has been so prejudiced is impossible to determine at this distance. But the French make such an allegation. Perhaps the fear would not have arisen if the French had been taken into the confidence of the British and American administrators in Berlin. Certainly, in view of the way Secretary Marshall talked to the House committee, the mistake would not have occurred if government in Germany were vested in the State Department instead of the Army. That is the main difficulty in America's occupation policy.

Herter Bill

A Communication

I HAVE READ your editorial of January 7, entitled "President's Power." The gist of the editorial is that the Herter bill for foreign aid would invade the constitutional prerogative of the President because it provides that a portion of the foreign-aid program shall be carried out by an "independent" agency rather than by the Department of State.

The argument made in the editorial seems to me to rest exclusively on the premise that the agency provided for in the Herter bill is to be an agency "independent" of the President. A knowledge of what an "independent" agency is under Federal law, or even a casual reading of the Herter bill itself, would show that this premise is incorrect.

When Congress creates an independent agency, as it has done many times, it is merely saying that the new agency is not to be "in" any existing agency. This does not mean, however, that the new agency is not under the control of the President. Under the Constitution all of the executive power is lodged in the President, and the various executive agencies are merely arms of the President. The President's control over such agencies can be made effective in many ways, the most dramatic of which is the power of removal. Only in the case of independent agencies vested with quasi-judicial functions can Congress place any limitations on this removal power.

THE HERTER BILL does not in any way seek to limit the President's control. On the contrary, its provisions throughout recognize the duties, powers and responsibilities of the President in the field of foreign relations. The bill, in section 11, creates a Foreign Aid Council consisting of the heads of the various departments and agencies (including the Department of State and the Emergency Foreign Reconstruction Authority provided for in the bill) participating in the foreign-aid program "to advise and consult with the President with respect to the establishment by him" of the programs of aid and of policies in connection therewith. The Secretary of State would be the chairman of this council.

The executive director of the Foreign Aid Council, who is also the chairman of the board of the Emergency Foreign Reconstruction Authority, can issue directives in execution of the President's program and policies only with the approval of the President (section 11, c).

THE STATED purposes and objects of the Emergency Foreign Reconstruction Authority itself (this being the "independent" agency about which the editorial complains) are, as set forth in section 20 (b), to "assist the Foreign Aid Council and its executive director in the performance of their respective functions" which have just been described—namely, to assist the President, and to execute, with the approval of the President, programs and policies of foreign aid that have been established by the President. It is only in furtherance of these purposes and objects and in execution of such programs and policies that the authority has power to make arrangements with foreign countries (section 20 (b) (1). The authority is required by section 20 (i) to make a report to the President every three months.

The chairman of the board of the authority, as well as its other directors, are all appointed by the President and can be removed by the President at any time for any reason, good or bad, or for no reason.

The editorial made mention of what it characterized as the "enormous" power of the authority to determine, prescribe and conclude the arrangements under which various commodities would be furnished to foreign countries. As I have previously indicated, this power can be exercised only in furtherance of the authority's stated objects, which are to execute, with the approval of the President, programs and policies of foreign aid established by him. There certainly is no constitutional requirement that arrangements of this character with foreign countries be negotiated and concluded by individuals who have the status of officers or employes of the Department of State rather than of some other agency in the executive branch of the Government over which the President has as much if not more control. If there were, much of what was done under lend-lease was done unlawfully.

FOR EXAMPLE, the arrangements with Great Britain under which approximately 300 Liberty ships were turned over to Great Britain in the early part of the war were negotiated and concluded on behalf of the United States not by the Secretary of State or by one of his subordinates, but by Admiral Land, the War Shipping Administrator. The Lend-Lease Administrator, and not the Department of State, was the operating agency which performed the function of implementing the various master lend-lease agreements.

Arrangements are constantly concluded with foreign governments by the Export-Import Bank for loans. So it is not at all unusual for agencies other than the Department of State to make arrangements with foreign countries of the general type contemplated.

Furthermore, the bill does not in any way foreclose the negotiation of agreements with foreign countries through the Department of State or its agencies if this proves desirable, and specific provision is included in the bill—Section 20 (h)—to give the new agency authority to utilize the services of any department of the Government with the consent of the head of the department.

ALL OF THE foregoing indicates that The Washington Post editorial is stating a legal conclusion on the basis of facts which do not exist. While the writer of that editorial asserts that one has only to read the Constitution to see how unassailable his position is, it would seem to me more logical to read the provisions of the bill first. The emergency foreign reconstruction authority provided for in the Herter bill is not independent of the President at all and is an "independent agency" only in the sense that it is not a part of any other Government agency. Moreover, its sole power is to execute, with the approval of the President, programs and policies of foreign aid established by the President himself.

The Herter bill represents the unanimous recommendations of the Select Committee on Foreign Aid. It was drafted with the assistance of Allen W. Dulles, a distinguished lawyer and chairman of the committee on international law of the New York County Lawyers Association, and Gerald D. Morgan, also a distinguished lawyer, who for many years was assistant legislative counsel of the House of Representatives. I have consulted them regarding your editorial, and they both concur in my reply.

CHRISTIAN A. HERTER,
Representative from Massachusetts.

Matter Of Fact

The Hook Is Barbed

WITH THE BLESSING and encouragement of Senator Robert A. Taft the more extreme isolationists among the Senate Republicans have now banded together in a sort of bloc or junta. Significantly, the immediate purpose of their quiet, unannounced meeting and caucusing during the past days is emphatically not to find the best way of defeating the European Recovery Program. The object is, rather, to find a compromise which will permit them to vote with Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, and thus maintain party unity in this election year.

They have, in fact, acknowledged to themselves, both isolationism's political danger to the Republicans, noted in this space some time ago, and the strategic strength of Senator Vandenberg's position, herein suggested last week. Personally these men are just as isolationist as they ever were. But politically they have become aware that they are impaled upon a hook, that the hook has very deep barbs, and that getting off the hook will improve the Republican chances next November.

The new movement obviously may transform itself, in case agreement cannot be reached, into a disciplined junta of bitter-enders, who will stop at nothing to tear the guts out of ERP. Many of the Senators would privately be pleased to do precisely this, so that the risk cannot be ignored.

THIS RISK is obviously meant to impress Senator Vandenberg. It would also be very unwise to feel that these men can find any grounds for argument with Vandenberg, even if he is ready to yield a little. About a score of Senators—which would include the whole hard core of Republican isolationism—are reported to be chiefly involved, although additional more moderate men may also be tagging along. The flavor of the group is best conveyed by the fact that two of the most active members are the Nebraska Senators, Hugh Butler and Kenneth Wherry.

The movement, of course, really derives from the presidential candidacy of Senator Taft. The Senators chiefly participating want to see Taft in the White House. They admire Taft. More important still, they realize that Taft's victory would be a triumph for the ultraconservative Republican wing which they represent.

Senator Taft himself has taken no active part in their meeting and caucusing, from a cautious fear that an unlucky outcome might implicate him later on as an isolationist extremist. But Taft, nonetheless, intervened decisively early in the process of coagulation of the Republican isolationists into an organized group. And Taft's influence was responsible for the group's decision to begin by seeking compromise.

If it had not been for Taft, these men would probably have started by issuing one of those statements of undying opposition of which Senator Wherry is the great English prosemaster.

THERE IS here something more than mere political expediency, as in most of Senator Taft's actions. For the first time in his political career, he has lately taken a little time to study the inwardness of the world problem, discussing it at some length with such men as Secretary of Defense James Forrestal. According to those close to him, he has been a little shaken by the result of his inquiries, accepting at last the impossibility of total American isolation.

Thus he sees the necessity of the ultimate passage of a European Recovery Program in some workable form, without regard to politics. The political expediency of Taft's new move lies, rather, in his effort to secure the company of all the other senatorial isolationists. He wants to avoid a solitary renunciation of his former position. If all the isolationists act together, it will tend to obscure any inconsistency with Taft's previous statements of policy. It will also leave no reasonable grounds for complaint by Col. Robert R. McCormick and other Taftites of his kidney.

Like every other political leader, wise and unwise, Senator Taft has a hankering to have his cake and eat it, too. In his case this hankering inevitably takes the form of a hankering both to have his Illinois delegates and to get off the isolationist hook. The hook has become considerably more painful since the recent test polls of presidential aspirants.

Presumably the members of leaders of this new movement to which Taft has given the initial impetus will shortly meet with Senator Vandenberg. They want compromise on two main points, the method of ERP administration, and the appropriation initially authorized, which they would like to hold to five billion dollars.

By referring the problem of administration to the Brookings Institution, Vandenberg has already prepared the raw material of compromise on the first point. He cannot give way very far on the second without rendering ERP ineffectual. It is quite impossible to predict whether some formula will be found to get over this difficulty. But the great point for the present is that even the bitter-enders have lost at least a little of their native Old Guard appetite for death rather than surrender.

Farm Labor Reconciliation Experiment Is Sabotaged

By Agnes E. Meyer

The great challenge to modern democracy lies in bringing about a reconciliation of our human and economic problems. Yet one of our most brilliant experiments to achieve this reconciliation was sabotaged when Congress last June took the placement of farm labor from the Agricultural Extension Service and returned it to the United States Employment Service.

"The Land Grant Colleges have specialized on soil conservation but have paid no attention to human conservation," said Caesar Hohn, director of the Texas Extension Farm Labor Program during its five years of operation. He was trying to clarify the extraordinary difficulties involved in the farm labor problem before I set out on a thousand-mile journey through the endless plains of Texas to study the Farm Extension program in action.

Has Never Lost Touch

Hohn, himself, is so human a person because he has never lost touch with the soil and with the men, women and children, farmers and workers alike, who make that soil productive. Energetic, strong, an intensely living figure of manhood, Hohn has a native gift of honest sympathy for all kinds of people, enhanced by a capacity for straight feeling, clear thinking and exact, vigorous expression.

We don't like the word "paternal" in our democratic country, but I never saw a great public servant who lacked this quality. The word gets an altogether new, warm and important connotation when you hear this broad-shouldered giant of a man, with weather-beaten features, set off by a great shock of white hair, talk about the Texas-Mexican laborers, about his staff of field men, and the job they tackled together of making the great processing companies and the farmers, large or small, aware of the fact that human erosion can be just as disastrous to our economy as soil erosion.

Dutch Hohn, as everyone affectionately calls him, is the epitome of the type of men who have developed the Extension Service program, in the different sections of our country. Raised on a farm, he worked his way through four years of college and is still fondly remembered as a star football and baseball captain. He has known Mexican labor since childhood and speaks Spanish fluently.

To Get Best Results

"When I had my first job on a farm after graduation, I took good care of the workers just as I would of the cattle or the equipment—to get the best results. Then I found out that treating human beings decently pays extra dividends. My men came back to me from Mexico regularly and brought their friends and relatives. These Latin Americans are peculiar people. If you don't understand them, you'll have a hard time getting them to do what you want. They have been misled for so long that they are apt to take anything the 'gringo' tells them with a grain of salt. But if you can win their confidence and they find out you are honest and truthful, they are the most loyal people in the world. Once they believe in you, they will do anything you suggest and believe anything you say."

This is the lesson Dutch Hohn has hammered into the consciousness of every Extension Service assistant: "Tell the truth to the migrants about every detail, working conditions, living conditions, pay, the size of crop, and even the farmer's disposition. It's a human and educational job. It's hard work. You've got to be willing to work 20 hours a day when necessary. If your heart's not in it, don't take the job," he would warn applicants before hiring them.

Problem of Understanding

"In our farm labor program we have been working with but one idea in mind in regard to the Latin American and that is to win his confidence. At first they wouldn't even listen to us. But we employed men who know the Latin American, his habits, his customs and his language. These men, some of them Latins themselves, had to have an absolute sense of fairness to both sides, both the laborer and the farmer. They get the job done by contacting the laborers in their homes, in the fields and on the road, always telling them the truth to win their confidence. The point I want to make is, it takes common sense and not a great deal of economics to figure out what needs to be done.

"With the farmers we had the job of making them understand the laborers' problems. Most of it had to be done through the county agent and his local farm labor advisory committee composed of farmers, every type of business man as well as the clergy of all the churches."

Hohn's method of selling these townspeople the idea that good treatment of the workers would pay, is typical of his practical approach to immediate necessity.

Let us not shut our eyes to the fact that racial antipathies such as exist in Texas between the Anglos and the Latins have deep roots. Wishful thinking does not eliminate them. Only cooperative endeavor toward practical objectives that are beneficial to both parties can soften these deep seated antipathies. Knowing this from experience, Hohn said to his local committees: "Your discriminatory practices are none of my business. But I have to get utilization of labor and you people have to save your crops. Of course, these people stink if they have to travel for weeks in their trucks without a chance to bathe or wash their clothes. You would, too. The thing to do is to give them a place near your town to rest, cook, wash and sleep."

As a result of such homely advice, the local business men and farmers built Reception Centers, toward which the Extension Service contributed only $300 plus supervisory assistance. Texas now has about 68 such overnight camps strategically placed along the migratory routes at intervals of an average day's travel. Many of them are primitive sheds with toilets and running water as their sole facilities. But even this was a haven where the migrant could at last feel welcome instead of wandering like an outcast month after weary month. Some of the rest centers are excellent structures with separate rooms, sanitary facilities, including showers, electric light and gas for cooking.

Lives Transformed

The workers' lives were transformed physically and psychologically through better living conditions and the feeling that the necessities of war production gave them a new status in our society. As a result they became better satisfied and the farmer got better service. Placement instead of being a blind catch as catch can, could now be arranged in an orderly fashion, at a common meeting ground where employer and laborer made terms according to a fixed wage scale. The centers also proved a protection to the towns against infection from the insanitary conditions which the migrants formerly created wherever they camped.

"Ninety-nine per cent of people will do the right thing if they understand," said Hohn. "If our labor program never did anything for me, for the staff, the farmers and workers, but increase our faith in humanity, I'm satisfied with it."

The staff consisted of 13 all-year-round field men who kept in touch with the migrants' families while they were at home, listed all the crew leaders, listened to their troubles and outlined the prospects for the coming season. In addition, 14 Spanish-speaking men helped with the routine during the period of heavy migration.

Early in 1946 the large beet sugar and canning companies in Michigan, Colorado and the other North-Central and Plains States which employ Texas-Mexicans, became so interested in the success of the Texas Extension Service program that they invited Dutch Hohn to send his field men into their territory. Poor housing in these cold, rainy States is an even greater obstacle to production than it is in Texas. Much trouble had also been created by the recruiters who promised the Texas migrants ideal living conditions and plenty of work at $15 a day. Hohn pointed out to the big processors and beet growers that it was a poor investment to spend over a million dollars for recruitment but nothing for treatment of the worker after he got there.

Spoiled During War

The treatment of native workers had also degenerated in these States, because the beet farmer was spoiled during the war by having labor—either PWs or foreigners — dumped at his front door every morning free of charge. These same big producers are now putting every kind of pressure on the U.S.E.S. and the State Department to continue the importation of labor from Mexico. Yet these foreign importations will cost their employers $250 a head. If one fifth of that sum were spent on recruiting, routing and protection of our own agricultural workers, it would be of permanent benefit to the Nation.

With mechanization creating more and more unemployment among migrants throughout the Nation, the importation of labor seems to Extension Service experts not only unjustified, but a serious threat to our own economy.

In '47 the Texas field men were again sent into the northern beet States at the request of the food processing companies under the personal direction of D. A. Adam, Assistant State Supervisor from Texas. With the cooperation of local Extension Service men, decided progress was made in repair, heating and wiring of housing, in the treatment of Texan workers and in securing interim jobs when there was no work in the beet fields. Not that the Extension Service men see the problem merely from the workers' point of view. The farmers' complaints got the same attention.

Best Job in Indiana

"The program up there has only just begun for proper utilization of our Texas Mexicans," said Dutch Hohn. "But Colorado has made great improvements. Indiana has done the best job of all and found out that it pays. This year 7000 of our Mexicans traveled from Texas to Indiana of their own accord. The Texas migratory movement needs advice, medical care and help from our representatives along the interstate highways. It would be a great pity if the Texas Employment Service does not work out methods whereby the whole program of cooperation between our Texan workers and the big sugar processors could be continued."

For much of the old evil conditions, Hohn blames the Land Grant Colleges. "They have failed the agricultural worker," he said to me, "because they did not recognize him as a part of the agricultural economy, but looked upon him as a commodity. They made no effort to teach the prospective farmers how to handle labor. The Extension Service Placement program has made some progress, but we are only just beginning to understand what the problem is about. The bankers are at fault, too, for they make loans without knowing how the farmer runs his business or how he treats his help. The State agricultural institutions should hang their heads in shame for what in the courts would be called criminal negligence.

"If the Extension Service could continue its work of bringing about understanding between the farmer and his labor, there would be no need for labor unions among farm workers. It is too bad that it took a terrible war to make the Extension Service conscious of the fact that they had overlooked a responsibility to the farm laborer and his family in the past years.

"You'll see when you go on the road tomorrow," Dutch Hohn concluded his advice, "that the U.S.E.S. has to blend this educational process into its program of agricultural placement or fail on the job. Instead of being a job of placement as the law states, this all resolves itself into nothing more than a job of education. The way to make agriculture pay the highest dividends is to build up the individual worker until his effort gives maximum production to his employer and maximum satisfaction to him."

(Tomorrow: Winning the confidence of Mexican migrant workers is the first and biggest job of the Texas Farm Placement Service.)

11 New Directors Listed In Bank Elections Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

Annual stockholders meetings of 14 Washington banks resulted yesterday in the election of 11 new directors.

Both National Savings & Trust Co. and Second National Bank elected three new board members. Lincoln National Bank, Union Trust Co. and Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co. each elected one new director. National Bank of Washington elected two new board members.

In some cases directors met immediately after the stockholders and reorganized the official staff. Changes generally were few. Six promotions were announced—two by Hamilton National Bank, one by National Bank of Washington, two by Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co. and one by Security Savings & Commercial Bank.

Retirement of John Alden as a vice president of National Bank of Washington after 45 years of service was announced.

Anacostia National Bank

Stockholders of Anacostia National Bank reelected directors as follows: F. T. Campbell, R. U. Cooper, George Curtis, W. L. Fowler, N. S. Healy, W. L. Koontz, C. B. Marbury, George S. Maier, J. R. Pyles, Ernest J. Read, Elmer M. Smith, George B. Stevens, L. W. Thompson, Robert Thompson and Irving Yochelson. Directors will meet this afternoon for election of officers.

Hamilton National Bank

Two promotions were announced yesterday by Hamilton National Bank. Aubrey O. Dooley, assistant trust officer, was elevated to trust officer and Warren Nussbaum was promoted to a trust officer. Stockholders reelected directors as follows: Paul A. Appleby, Edward C. Baltz, Thomas N. Beaver, Walter A. Bloedorn, Emory H. Bogley, William H. Clarke, Arthur L. Day, Charles B. Dulcan, sr., Joshua Evans, jr., Warren B. Forster, Edwin C. Graham, Howard W. Kacy, Wilfred B. Putnam, Horace G. Smithy, Loenard P. Steuart, W. J. Waller, Chester Wells, Roger J. Whiteford and Mabel Walker Willebrandt.

President Waller announced declaration of a $1 dividend on capital stock, payable February 2 to stock of record January 22. Surplus and undivided profits as of December 31, 1947, were $2,923,384, Waller added.

Lincoln National Bank

George E. Norton was elected to the board of Lincoln National Bank to succeed his father, the late Howard R. Norton. Other directors were reelected as follows: George I. Borger, William W. Brawner, Floyd E. Davis, Floyd E. Davis, jr., W. Gwynn Gardiner, jr., Albert S. Gatley, Leroy W. Herron, Arthur C. Keefer, Robert E. Lee, David Maxwell, John W. Miller, Richard A. Norris, Harry Sherby, Fred A. Smith, Guy T. Steuart, W. McK. Stowell, Channing S. Walker and Howard L. Wilkins.

Reelected officers included Floyd E. Davis, president; Richard A. Norris, executive vice president and cashier; Albert S. Gatley, Fred A. Smith and Robert E. Lee, vice presidents; J. Frank Rice, assistant cashier and assistant trust officer; Louis C. Palladini, controller; William M. Harris, auditor, and Nelson M. Stokes, vice president and branch manager.

McLachlen Banking Corp.

All directors and officers of McLachlen Banking Corp. were reelected at the annual meeting. Directors: Everett J. Boothby, A. H. Brewood, Guy D. Cowl, Dr. Depue H. Duffy, Clyde D. Garrett, John C. Harding, P. Y. K. Howat, Archibald McLachlen, E. H. McLachlen, Lanier P. McLachlen, George Miller and G. A. Pendleton. Officers: L. P. McLachlen, president; Archibald McLachlen, vice president and treasurer; Guy D. Cowl, vice president and assistant treasurer; G. A. Pendleton, vice president and assistant treasurer; C. C. Guerpler, assistant treasurer; William M. McLure, assistant treasurer; E. M. Brotherhood, secretary and assistant treasurer; F. B. Poole, assistant treasurer; F. T. Kelly, auditor; Wilford R. Dagen, branch manager; H. S. Wade, assistant branch manager.

National Bank of Washington

Stockholders of National Bank of Washington elected two new directors at the annual meeting. They are William E. Howard, a vice president of the bank, and Horace J. Donnelly, jr., local attorney. Reelected directors: James W. Anderson, Edgar N. Brawner, Louis M. Denit, Rutherford J. Dooley, Herbert Guggenheim, V. Manning Homan, James J. Hughes, Frank R. Jelleff, Mark Lansburgh, Morris E. Marlow, Arthur J. May, W. Clarence Miller, Clarence F. Norment, jr., Harry Norment, John Scrivener, Odell S. Smith, Waldo J. Tastet, J. Frank White and T. Nelson Jeffres.

Announcement was made that John Alden was retiring as a vice president after about 45 years of service, but will remain on the directorate. Also, Mrs. Fonsia K. Alden was promoted to assistant trust officer. Relected officers include: Odell S. Smith, board chairman; J. Frank White, president; Edmund H. Graham, Clarence F. Norment, jr., William E. Howard, vice presidents, and Rutherford J. Dooley, vice president and cashier.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

FOR BETTER OR WORSE, Navy is taking unto itself a civilian football coach. The clamor on that score at least is stilled, and even the most dyspetic skeptic can preceive a turn for the better in Navy's football fortunes, if only on the theory they could scarcely be worse. A mere two victories in the last two seasons allow an immense latitude for improvement, little chance of a relapse.

POVICH

A civilian coach isn't the cure-all, though, for Navy's football ills. No officer-coach ever made a tackle as such, and no civilian coach ever grabbed a ball, shook off one-two-three tacklers and zigzagged his way to a touchdown from his seat on the bench. The game is still played by players, not by coaches, and neither Frank Leahy nor Fritz Crisler scored a point all season for Notre Dame and Michigan.

Good football players are pretty essential. Red Smith relates Gus Welch's story at the football coaches meeting in New York last week. Welch, it seems, had just joined the Carlisle Indians. Play No. 48 was called and Welch asked Jim Thorpe what he should do on the play. "Just block the end for me," said Thorpe. "What if I miss him?" asked Welch. "Well, just keep going," said Thorpe.

"THAT'S WHAT I DID," related Welch. I tried to block the left end and missed him. I kept going, and decided to take a shot at the defensive left half-back, and I missed him, too. So there was nothing to do except keep moving and try to take out the safety man. He side-stepped me. You know," grinned Welch, "Thorpe and I made a touchdown on that play."

Obviously, the Navy people kicked Tom Hamilton upstairs when they made him athletic director and decided on a new policy of civilian coaches. Navy's poor showing under Hamilton was scarcely any indictment of his ability as a coach. His competency was pretty well established before the war, before Navy was favored with the pick of war-time talent. In three years as Navy's head coach, Hamilton saw his teams slapped down by Notre Dame twice and Army twice.

For Navy's new coach, the pay will be good, the conditions pleasant, and certainly he will have security in the form of a contract for five years or such, but otherwise it will have to be a lion-hearted citizen who accepts the job. He'll go in aware that at Navy you can't recruit football players with the ease of a coach at a civilian college. The husky prep school tackle can't major in physical education or otherwise elect soft subjects. As they say at Annapolis, the only thing a cadet can choose for himself is his roommate.

THE CIVILIAN COLLEGES can prate of their purity code, and take the pledge and otherwise express their new-found piety as they did at New York last week, but they'll still round up the good football players in the same old devious ways and lick the tar out of the schools that don't have a good recruiting system.

The Pacific Coast Conference made an honest effort to curb recruiting and police itself with a former FBI man as conference commissioner, and look what happened, after they cut down on the special inducements to the athletes. UCLA, the Coast champion of 1946, was whacked, 45 to 14, in the Rose Bowl, and this year's coast champion, Southern Cal., was racked up in successive games, 38 to 7 by Notre Dame, and 49 to 0 by Michigan.

It's no coincidence that Notre Dame comes up with good football teams. In Leahy it has a master coach and the school is a natural magnet for every Catholic kid with football talent who wants the honor of playing for Notre Dame. But the Irish are not above using special persuasion on any lad who comes to their notice as the type who would help maintain Notre Dame football on the high standard to which it is accustomed.

FOR NAVY and Army, too, the painful fact may be, is that service careers have been deglamorized for some young men. At least one Navy man points out that there is no great rush to enroll in the two service academies at this time. Several hundred appointments are going begging at each academy, and getting the cadets and midshipmen in has been a task, even when they are not football prospects with offers from other schools.

"Many a boy has had older brothers in the service during the war, who had their fill of it, and are advising their kid brothers to stay away from military careers," said our Navy informant. "It's an influence we have to reckon with and it isn't making it any easier for us to sell naval careers to graduating schoolboys, particularly those who can play football and are promised easier conditions by civilian schools."

Navy says it is considering fifty applicants for the job as Hamilton's successor as head coach. It behooves the Navy people to choose carefully, because considering what he has to work with, the Navy coach must bring a special genius to the job.

NFL Owners Face Vital Legislation

New York, Jan. 13.—The National Football League's annual post-season fireworks, technically known as the owners' meeting, opens quietly here tomorrow with a meeting of the rules committee but before it adjourns Sunday some of the most radical changes in years may take place.

On the official agenda, and unofficially lurking in the minds of various owners for discussion, are such matters as:

1. The 1948 schedule.
2. An application by the San Francisco Clippers for membership in the N. F. L.
3. The effect of television on professional football.
4. Elimination of the extra point after touchdown.
5. Adoption of a "sudden death" period to avoid tie games.
6. The "common draft" of collegiate players with the All-America Conference.
7. A world championship post-season game with the All-America Conference winner.
8. Cancelation of the N. F. L. champion's annual date with the collegiate All-Stars in Chicago.
9. Trades.

Commissioner Bert Bell, at his headquarters in Philadelphia, yesterday said he will back legislation for elimination of the point after touchdown and substitution for an extra period of play. He said he considered this one of the most vital items to be considered.

"We play strictly for spectator interest," Bell said, "and we're for anything that will make the game more appealing to the fan in the stands."

Opposition to Bell's proposal is anticipated from Coach Curly Lambeau of the Green Bay Packers, who wants to retain the extra point but inaugurate the "sudden death" playoff.

Owner George Marshall of the Washington Redskins, hurrying eastward from California with Coach Turk Edwards, was quoted as "interested in improving the Redskins more than anything else." He called every Redskin player except Sammy Baugh, and every Redskin draftee, "potential trading material."

Little Support for Plan

Marshall's plan to have the N. F. L. withdraw from the Chicago All-Star game, if brought up at this meeting, was expected to have little support.

Philadelphia Owner Alexis Thompson, proponent of the "common draft," was in Switzerland with the Olympic bobsled team, but any one of several other owners could bring up the All-America Conference tie-up.

Gilmer on Way For Contract Talks

Harry Gilmer, the Redskins' No. 1 draft choice from Alabama, will arrive in Washington for a contract conference Sunday, it was announced by the local pro football office yesterday. All details of the visit were kept strictly secret.

Zaslofsky Is Visitors' Big Scorer

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The last time the Chicako Stags visited Uline Arena they put the Washington Capitols out of basketball business.

That was last spring when the Windy City shotmakers swept the Caps out of the Basketball Association of America playoffs.

Tonight, at 8:30 o'clock, the Stags make their seasonal debut at the M street ice palace.

Last year's Western Division champions are not only leading the packs again, but they've decisioned Washington two out of the three times they've played this year, all in Chicago.

Stags Have 14-6 Record

The 14-6 record Coach Harold Olsen's pacesetters own is the best in either division and represents a lead of 3½ games over the Caps, who are currently wallowing in the Western Division cellar.

Back from last year's high scoring unit are Max Zaslifsky, the league's fourth leading scorer last year; Chuck Gilmer, former University of Washington luminary who hogtied Bones McKinney in the playoffs; Jim Seminoff, one of the league's best floor men, and Mickey Rottner, whom the Stags call the "quarterback" of their high-geared offense.

Zaslofsky has scored 66 points in his last two games.

The Caps reach the halfway mark of their 48-game schedule tonight. This time last season they were in the midst of a 19-game winning streak and had lost but six games. Currently, they have dropped 11 of their 23 outings. They lost only 11 of their entire 60 games last year.

Caps Have Hopes

Drubbed in Boston after their terrific 109-86 triumph over Philadelphia here Saturday, the Caps believe they have sufficiently recovered from the setback and will have enough bounce to trim the Stags this evening.

The regular starting cast, Bob Feerick, Bones McKinney, Fred Scolari, Johnny Norlander and John Mahnken will see most of the action with Irv Torgoff and Sonny Hertzberg serving as first line replacements.

In a preliminary, set for 7:15, Fort Myer takes on the YMCA quintet.

Syracuse Rally Fails, CCNY Wins

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—City College of New York staved off a second-half rally by Syracuse tonight to register its ninth victory in 12 starts, a 61-55 verdict, in the opening game of a college basketball double-header before a crowd of 18,000 at Madison Square Garden.

Across the Nation:

Babe May Get Chance at Men Golfers

DENVER, Jan. 13 (AP).—A campaign was under way today to give Milldred (Babe) Zaharias of Denver a chance to compete against the country's leading professional golfers.

An honorary membership in the Rocky Mountain Professional Golfers Association, the first ever given a woman, was presented yesterday to the former Babe Didrikson, who won the British title and numerous American crowns before turning professional.

Ralph (Rip) Arnold, Cherry Hills Club professional and regional PGA president, said the belting Babe is now entitled to compete in all Rocky Mountain PGA tournaments.

"We intend at the next national meeting to try to get an honorary membership for the Babe in the national association," Arnold said.

Tar Heels Ineligible

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 13 (AP).—The faculty committee on eligibility at the University of North Carolina today ruled Bill Miller, first-string forward on Coach Tom Scott's undefeated basketball quintet, ineligible for participation in varsity athletics.

Professor of Physical Education O. K. Cornwell said that the faculty committee took the action after reviewing the student's eligibility questionnaire today and discovering that Miller, a transfer student from Eastern Kentucky Teachers College, was not in service prior to August 12, 1945, and consequently did not meet conference regulations.

Babe Ruth 'Doing Nicely'

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (AP).—Babe Ruth, the former home run king, is "doing nicely" at the Medical Center, where he is undergoing a physical checkup, his wife reported today.

"I hope to have him back home within a few days, and next week we plan to go to Florida," Mrs. Ruth said.

Virginia League Joins

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 13 (AP).—The Class D Virginia League has been approved as a member of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, President George M. Trautman announced today. The league is the fifty-seventh in the organization of minors.

Keller Signs

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (AP).—The New York baseball Yankees today announced the signing for 1948 of their veteran leftfielder, Charlie Keller, and Clifford Mapes, slugging young outfielder from Kansas City.

With Keller in the fold, the world champions now have signed all three of their regular outfielders, both Joe Dimaggio and Tommy Henrichs having previously come to terms.

Odell Huskies' Coach?

Seattle, Jan. 13 (AP).—The Times said today Howie Odell, head football coach at Yale, would be the new grid mentor at the University of Washington.

Late last week the Times said in a dispatch from New York that the selection of a successor to Ralph (Pest) Welch had narrowed to Odell and George Sauer of Kansas.

Today the article said a long distance telephone call to the University of Kansas brought the information that Sauer had signed a new four-year contract there. The Times said this left Odell alone in the picture.

Lions Falter; Beaten, 3-2, By Pittsburgh

The classy Pittsburgh Hornets put on a terrific last period rally to hand the Washington Lions their seventh straight loss, 3-2, before 1231 fans last night at Uline Arena.

Les Costello's goal with a minute to play was the climax to a three goal third period attack which overcame a 2-0 Washington lead. Even in defeat Gordie Bell, Lion goalie was spectacular as he med 34 stops to Pittsburgh Goalie Baz Bastien's 16.

Playing inspired hockey, the Lions astounded everyone by taking a 1-0 lead in the first period and increasing their margin to 2-0 in the second session.

Frank Porteous scored the first Washington goal after taking a pass from his brother, Dan, and ramming a 10-foot blast past Pittsburgh's great goalie, Baz Bastien, with little more than three minutes remaining in the opening period.

Midway through the second stanza, Larry Archambeault intercepted a Hornet pass at mid-ice and skated rapidly dwon the left side of the rink. Passed to Don Slater who skated in and fired a perfect shot.

2000 Kids Have Big Night

Dickie Starts Caps' Clinics, Demands, 'Gimme the Ball'

WITH A NONDESCRIPT uniform and eyes almost popping out with eagerness, 7-year-old Dickie Smith sauntered into the Coolidge gymnasium last night and in a demanding voice said:

"Gimme that ball and let's get going."

Young Dickie was just one of over 2000 District kids who turned out of the opening sessions of The Washington Post-Washington Capitols basketball clinic.

All 10 of the District gyms, where the first of four sessions were conducted, reported near capacity, enthusiastic crowds for the classes which were conducted by the Caps under the supervision of the District Recreation Department.

Passing and dribbling were the fundamentals taught yesterday. The Cap instructors showed their pupils how to perform the fundamentals and then stood by and watched the kids as they went through the paces themselves.

Ten kids were selected at each school to be guests at future Cap games. Fifty will be on hand at tonight's Cap-Stag game, 50 more Saturday night and so on for the next three weeks.

* * * *

EACH YOUNGSTER filled out a registration card, then sat back as their instructor explained the first lesson. The youngsters were almost as eager to register as they were to practice, because those who attend the sessions regularly will be awarded attractive diplomas when the classes are completed.

Miss Mildred Rothgeb, executive vice president of Uline Arena, the official hostess to the kids at the Cap games, attended two of the clinics and beamed with enthusiasm:

* * * *

THE MOST enthusiastic "kid" of them all at Wilson was Center John Mahnken, who got right in the groove with his 'teen-age pupils. Mahnken gave it everything he had and remained at his post long after the one hour time limit had expired.

"I got a great kick out of it," Mahnken said, "and am looking forward to next Tuesday night's class with just as much eagerness as the boys."

Ditto Bob Feerick, Fred Scolari, Bones McKinney, Sonny Hartsberg, Jack Tingle, Irv Torgoff, Johnny Norlander and Dick O'Keefe.

Baltimore's Tough Loyola Plays Catholic Here Tonight

Catholic University's improving basketball squad faces its most difficult league test of the season when it entertains Jim Lacy and his Loyola teammates tonight at 8:45 in the C. U. gym.

The defending champion Loyola team is currently in first place in the Mason-Dixon Conference with a 3-0 record, while Catholic is fifth with 4-2.

The usually high scoring Lacy, who last year was second top point-maker in the United States, has been held to 33 points in three conference games to date. But the tall Loyola star is also his team's best playmaker, setting up most of the Loyola points when he isn't scoring himself.

Incidentally, Lacy's ability to put the ball through the opposition's hoop is a family characteristic. His dad, when playing for tthe Loyola Baltimore High School team in 1922, scored 74 points in a single game against the Park School.

Catholic will start the team that opened the American game tonight. Scotty Cranston and John Lambert will be at the forwards, George Laubacher will play center and Jack Walsh and Gene Szklarz will hold down the guard posts.

Laubacher has been one of the principal reasons for Catholic's marked improvement. The lanky center has tallied 69 points and is in top spot in the Mason-Dixon individual scoring race. Cranston is second with 77 tallies and Szklarz, with 61, stands fourth behind Towson Teacher's Bud Kimmett.

Maryland, Hoyas, American Play Games Away Tonight

George Washington, defiated by Georgetown Monday night in its second setback of the season, will be in Durham tonight to meet Duke in a Southern Conference game.

Maryland and American U. also will be on the road. The Terps travel over to Annapolis to face the Midshipmen at 4:30 this afternoon and American will play the Marines at Quantico tonight.

George Washington, third in Conference standings behind North Carolina and North Carolina State, will be facing an in-and-out Duke quintet. The Blue Devils have played only three league games, losing one, and have an overall record of 6-5.

Bill Cantwell, leading Southern Conference scorer with 90 points in eight games, has to do better than he did against Georgetown to protect his top position. Cantwell made only eight points against the Hoyas.

Close on Cantwell's heels are Bob Goldsmith, W. & L.; Buddy Cheek, Davidson, and teammate Johnny Moffatt. The first two have 83 points each and Moffatt has 82.

Maryland goes into the Navy game after having received a 64-44 drubbing at the hands of Virginia. Navy also lost last time out, being outdistanced by Villanova, 61-39.

American U. and Quantico Marines will be staging a replay of their interesting engagement here last Saturday. The Eagles took that, 50-46, on last-minute backets by Pete Nagley and Don Hillock.

Cy Waldrop, who scored 20 point sagainst American here, is the ma nthe Eagles have to watch. On Saturday, Walrrop and Hap Spuhler led a spurt that gave Quantico eight straight baskets and a 36-26 lead at the beginning of the second half. But American U. then rallied to win.

Nothing New on Coach

Hamilton's New Navy Job Good for Next Two Years

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13.—Capt. Tom Hamilton will remain at the Naval Academy for two years as director of athletics, academy officials said today.

Hamilton steps up to the directorship after two seasons as head football coach in the academy's recently announced decision to hire a civilian coach.

By remaining at Annapolis until June, 1950, Hamilton will have time to lend his experience to the new football coach in properly establishing himself.

Capt. Edmund B. (Whitey) Taylor, whom Hamilton succeeds as director of athletics, said today "there is nothing new on the new coach."

Hamilton, who attended a banquet at Notre Dame Monday night, was "somewhere in the Midwest" trying to return to Annapolis through bad weather.

Asked if Hamilton discussed with Frank Leahy, Notre Dame coach, the possibility of Leahy coming to the academy, Navy officials said:

"Hamilton was advised while at Notre Dame of the decision to hire a civilian coach."

There was no comment beyond that point.

The 'Clutch' Faces Rhode on Mat

Nanjo Singh's Cobra Clutch may grab him a chance at the wrestling title tonight when he takes on Dutch Rhode of Camden, N. J., in the feature one-hour time-limit bout at Turner's Arena.

Winner of tonight's bout will be given a shot at FrankSexton.

The preliminary card has Billy Darnell against Francois Miquett, Tony Cosenza against Harry Armus, Jesse James against Ace Freeman and Steve Gob against Ivan Mikeloff.

The Young Men's Shop
36th Anniversary Year at 1319 F St.

St. John's Easily Defeats Woodrow Wilson, 47-31

Bill Bennings

Dear Folks: At Gulfstream. Silver anniversaries are not to unusual in everday life, but they are a racing rarity. Fortunes sometimes rise or fall on the performance of a single horse, and it is not surprising that trainers and owners often agree to disagree after only short periods. The turnover among race horse trainers—although less publicized—is as fast as among football coaches and the managers of big league baseball clubs. The observance of a silver anniversary for an owner-trainer combination, therefore, is out of the ordinary, and Hialeah race course will be the scene of the first step in the celebration of such an anniversary when the track opens on Friday. Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons—when he sends out the first horse belonging to Belair Stud opening day or soon after—will be formally beginning his twenty-fifth year as conditioner of the thoroughbreds owned by William Woodward, master of the Belair Stud stable and chairman of the Jockey Club. Fitzsimmons' record in 24 years with Belair Stud is unparalleled. Twice Mr. Fitz—as he is affectionately known—has saddled triple crown champions, the only trainer in history to accomplish this feat. He sent out Gallant Fox in 1930 to win the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes for Belair Stud, and repeated in 1935 with Omaha. In 1939 he won both the Derby and Belmont with Johnstown, but a rainstorm and heavy track in the Preakness cost Belair Stud a third triple crown.—BILL.

George Gets 17 as Cadets Win Fifth

St. John's racked up its fifth basketball triumph, downing Woodrow Wilson High, 47-31, yesterday on the losers' court.

The surprisingly easy victory preserved the Saints unspotted record against local competition.

Forward Jack George set the pace yesterday with 17 points on 7 goals and 3 foul throws. Guard Vince Durkin helped with 7 more floor shots for a 14 point total.

Two Games Put Off

Snow and icy rain, which made suburban roads dangerous yesterday forced postponement of two high school basketball games.

The St. Anthony's-Sherwood game at Sherwood, Sandy Springs, Md., was postponed until February 4. The Roosevelt-Bladensburg contest at Bladensburg, Md., was moved back to January 26.

THE 30 MILLION DOLLAR KID—No boxer in the world can have more heart and courage than 3-year-old Terry Tullos, infantile paralysis victim who has been selected to be the 1948 "March of Dimes" poster boy. Battling Terry, from Laurel, Miss., will open the District of Columbia and national campaign tomorrow at the March of Dimes booth located in front of the Capitol Theater. With Terry leading the way, the campaign should be a knockout

'Test Tube' Baby Ruled 'Legitimate'

MRS. STRNAD AND CHILD

ANTOINE STRNAD

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

The New York Supreme Court has ruled that a child born as the result of artificial insemination is legitimate.

The ruling was made by Justice Henry Clay Greenberg in deciding that the estranged husband of Mrs. Julie Strnad, 31, had a right to visit her daughter, 4-year-old Antoinette, who she said was a product of artificial insemination. Mrs. Strnad claimed that her husband, Antoine, 42, was sterile since birth, an allegation he denied. She sought to prevent him from seeing the child on the ground Antoinette was not the offspring of her former mate. She had won a separation decree and principal custody of the child last October.

134 Hungarian Horses Ruled Legal Booty

The Senate Armed Services Committee voted yesterday that the Hungarian horses brought to this country as Army war booty should stay here.

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) announced the committee voted unanimously for the plan to keep the horses, which his subcommittee recommended after extensive hearings last month.

The Army wanted to keep the horses; the State Department wanted them returned to Hungary. Shipment of the 134 horses was held up pending action of the Senate committee.

The subcommittee report calls for the Army Services Committee to notify both Senate and Army departments that the horses should not be returned to Hungary.

Morse said the report sustained completely the Army position, and overruled completely the State Department opposition in the dispute.

The subcommittee decided the United States has legal title to the captured horses, both under the rules of land warfare, and under the Hungarian Peace Treaty.

The report also said:

"The subcommittee takes judicial notice of the fact that if these horses were returned to Hungary their chief value would be for military use in the Hungarian army, or in the case of older brood mares, for the production of horses to be used in the Hungarian army.

"The testimony in this case shows that expert American horsemen believed these horses to be the best military type horses in the world.

"Further, the record shows that both the Hungarian and Russian armies rely heavily upon horses for military operations and in view of the fact that Hungary is a Russian satellite state the sending of these horses back to Hungary would amount in fact to strengthening the military forces of Hungary and Russia."

Marshall Gets Routine Checkup at Walter Reed

Secretary of State Marshall took a day off yesterday to undergo a routine physical examination at the Army's Walter Reed Hospital.

As a permanent five-star general, Marshall is required by regulation to undergo such checkups annually; at this time of the year. Marshall is scheduled to leave tonight for Pittsburgh for an address the following day before the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce.

Truman Approves N. Y. Anti-Wallace Alliance, Berle Says

By the United Press

President Truman was quoted yesterday as giving full approval to plans for an anti-Wallace alliance between the Democrats and the newly formed Libertal Party of New York.

Adolf A. Berle, jr., former Assistant Secretary of State and chairman of the Liberal group, said after a White House conference that Mr. Truman had pledged help in making arrangements for a coalition to combat former Vice President Henry A. Wallace's third party presidential drive in the vital New York race.

"The President was very courteous and is helping to make the necessary arrangements," Berle said, adding a confident forecast that the Liberal Party would ignore Wallace and poll 400,000 votes for Mr. Truman in November.

This announcement—the first to indicate that the President has taken a personal lead in the fight to offset Wallace's left-wing candidacy—came as Senator Clyde M. Reed (R., Kan.) voiced confidence that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will accept the Republican presidential nomination "if it comes to him honestly."

"I have not consulted with the general," Reed said, "but I am sure that if the Republican Party undertakes to draft him without connivance from any group, he will make the race in November."

Eisenhower, now nursing a cold at his Fort Myer, Va., home, has failed to request that his name be removed from the New Hampshire contest March 9 to choose delegates to the GOP national convention. An Eisenhower-pledged slate of delegates, led by the son of Senator Charles W. Tobey, prominent New England liberal Republican leader, already has lled for this election. Slates pledged to New York's Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and former Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota also will be in the race.

Eisenhower supporters announced last night that his name will be entered on the ballot in Pennsylvania's April 27 primary.

Reed's effort to keep the Eisenhower political ball rolling coincided with these political developments:

1. Paul E. Fitzpatrick, New York State Democratic chairman, conferred with President Truman yesterday, but claimed they did not discuss the possible effect of Wallace's third party candidacy on the New York outcome in November.

2. Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt called at the White House but told reporters who asked whether she had discussed politics the "I have no politics."

The Federal Diary

Senate Passes Bills Of Importance To Federal Workers

ACTION: The Senate has approved these important Federal worker bills:

1. The AIKEN BILL to increase the travel allowance of Federal civilian and military personnel from $6 to $8 a day. It provides that the Budget Bureau shall set up allowances for civilian and military people who are ordered to travel outside this country on official business.

The bill also directs the Treasury Department to set up a system to advance funds to employes who are ordered to travel. Whatever sum is advanced must be fully accounted for at a later date.

The bill now goes to the House. It's to go into effect 90 days after it becomes law.

2. LANGER-THYE BILL to pay the salaries of Federal workers who are unjustly fired or suspended and who win appeals and are ordered restored to their old jobs. The salaries of such employes would be paid in full for the period lost "less any amounts earned through other employment during such period of suspension or discharge."

The bill is aimed primarily to give added protection to veterans. However, it would apply to all employes and it covers all suspensions and firings. For example, an employe who is suspended on disloyalty charges and who is cleared subsequently by the Civil Service Loyalty Review Board would be able to collect under it.

In addition, the bill is made retroactive to January 1 of last year. This means that the State and Central Intelligence employes who were fired and suspended on loyalty charges and who were later cleared would be able to collect their salaries for the time they lost in appealing their cases. This bill also goes to the House.

3. A third bill would benefit veterans. As explained by Senator O'Conor (D., Md.), this bill would give Federal agencies the authority to withdraw orders to fire veterans. The Senator explained that Civil Service had ruled that agencies can't withdraw firing orders even if they wish. Instead, the veterans must be rehired as new employes, and in doing so, they lose within-grade promotions and other rights.

This bill would be an amendment to the Veterans Preference Act of 1944. The House has approved a similar bill. It now appears the bills will be sent to a House-Senate conference.

The most important bill, of course, is the Aiken bill to raise travel allowances. Most every Federal worker who must travel must pay several dollars a day out of his pocket to meet normal expenses. Any number of employes have refused to travel because they couldn't afford this extra cost.

Senator Aiken (R., Vt.) tried his best to get Senate approval of his bill last year. Several Senators objected to it. However, these Senators traveled during the congressional recess and they learned the hard way that $6 a day expenses it totally inadequate.

The bill to deny veterans preference to members of the Coast Guard temporary reserve also was called up in the Senate. It was blocked by Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) who said he had become convinced that some Coast Guard reservists were "properly qualified" for preference. He asked that the bill go over until he could investigate further.

The Langer-Chavez-Stevenson retirement bill also was called up, but it, too, was blocked by several objections. A GOP committee composed of Senators Langer, Taft and Williams is working on a compromise retirement bill.

PAY RAISES: Chairman Langer of the Senate Civil Service Committee said yesterday that he would definitely open hearings tomorrow on his bill to raise salaries of Federal workers by $1000 each. Postal groups will be among the first to be heard. Also, officials of the Bureau of Labor Statistics will testify on the rise in the cost of living.

INCREASE: In his budget message, the President said that temporary cost-of-living pay raises and benefits would cost the Government $2,400,000,000 a year. This is how that figure was computed:

Military pay, allotments and retirement, 700 million dollars; civilian pay, 950 million dollars; veteran pensions and allowances, 700 million dollars, and pensions to retired Federal workers, 60 million dollars.

But as I reported here yesterday, the President is not opposed to the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson retirement bill. That bill would raise the pensions of Federal workers by a flat $300 or 25 per cent, whichever is smaller.

Howard Grad Wins $150 for X-Ray Slogan

'Happy? Healthy? Stay That Way!' Urges Author in Jingle

"Happy? Healthy? Stay That Way! Get Your Chest X-Ray Today."

The slogan, adjudged best of 8000 submitted in the Washington Chest X-Ray Survey slogan contest, brought first prize of $150 to its author, Miss Janet E. Childs, Howard University graduate, yesterday.

Announcement of the seven contest winners and awarding of the top prize was made here, concurrent with the opening of neighborhood chest examinations in the drive to X-ray some 600,000 Washington residents and workers.

Three mobile chest X-ray units took up stations yesterday at three Anacostia points, the start of a scientific criss-crossing of the city to bring the health service eventually to all residents. The X-ray drive against tuberculosis will continue until June 15.

Chest X-Ray Hours And Stations Listed

Any person over 15 years of age may drop in for free, confidential chest X-ray between the designated hours at the following locations:

Central Survey Unit, 1530 Pennsylvania ave. nw., daily, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Mobile Unit No. 1, 61st and Dix sts. ne., Tuesday through Saturday, 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Mobile Unit No. 2, S. Capitol st. and Nichols ave. sw., Tuesday through Saturday, 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Mobile Unit No. 3, Pennsylvania and Minnesota aves. se., Tuesday through Saturday, 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Mobile Unit No. 4, Connecticut ave. and K st. nw., daily except Sunday, 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Confidential findings of your X-ray will be mailed to your home, regardless of where you live. All service is free, and without embarrassment.

Mason Presents Prize

Miss Childs, of 1907 3rd st. nw., received her prize from District Commissioner Guy Mason in a ceremony at the Central Unit of the Survey, at 1350 Pennsylvania ave. nw. Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director of the bureau for tuberculosis, D. C. Health Department, and survey director, participated.

Prize money other than first place is being mailed to the six other winners by the Public Information Committee of the Survey, it was announced by Carter T. Baron and John J. Payette, co-chairmen. These include:

Second prize, $25, Mrs. Marjorie Bouck, 305 E. Westmoreland rd., Falls Church, Va., "Be Sure You're Well; Let X-Ray Tell."

Five additional prizes of $5 each, to Mrs. Arthur Eugene Beach, 4609 30th st. nw.; Mrs. Richard Mulberry, 4655 36th st. S., Arlington, Va.; Mrs. L. Carl Peoples, 2209 Pennsylvania ave. nw.; James Wasserman, 700 Jefferson st. nw., and Mrs. Mamie Oneal, 514 19th st. nw.

The three mobile X-ray units which began operations yesterday were located at 61st and Dix sts. ne., South Capitol st. and Nichols ave. sw., and Pennsylvania and Minnesota aves. se. A fourth mobile unit went into service Monday at Connecticut ave. and K st. nw.

Besides these, seven portable X-ray machines have been set up in Government agencies and two others will be operating today at the Mayflower Hotel and Garfinckel's department store, all for employes of the establishments.

Members of the Orr School Parent-Teachers Association, yesterday aided their neighborhood drive for all-out participation in the chest X-ray survey by soliciting all adults over 15 years of age in the area to get out early for chest examinations.

At White House

Veterans Ask Subsistence Rate Boost

Student veterans seeking increased subsistence rates said last night they had assurances President Truman would not object. They also said they had ardent suport from Presidential Candidate Henry A. Wallace.

The President in his budget message Monday opposed an increase at this time.

However, students representing schools in 14 States spent an hour with the President's military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughn, at the White House late yesterday.

Afterward, said Henry Carp, University of Baltimore student, spokesman for the group, Vaughn conferred with Mr. Truman and reported back, "the President will offer no objection to any bill which would take care of an increase of subsistence."

The delegates, banded together as "Operation Subsistence," asked that present monthly allotments of $65 for single students and $90 for married students be increased to offset rising living costs.

Meanwhile 27 student veterans from Illinois were stranded here last night when their chartered bus and its driver mysteriously disappeared.

Both bus and driver were last seen at 5:39 a. m. Monday, when the group arrived here to participate in the two-day lobby.

It was to pick them up last night at the Interior Department, where the delegates from "Operation Subsistence" met both days.

The driver has ont reported back to his employers in Chicago, the students said. They asked police help in finding him.

Consecration Of O'Boyle Set Today

First Archbishop Of Washington To Be Elevated In New York

By John A. Singerhoff
Post Reporter

New York, N. Y.,, Jan. 13.—Right Rev. Msgr. Patrick A. O'Boyle, native of Scranton, Pa., and long time New York welfare worker, will be consecrated first Archbishop of Washington at St. Patrick's Cathedral here at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

In solemn ceremonies before national and world leaders of all faiths, and some 500 Roman Catholic clergy, Monsignor O'Boyle will be elevated to the archepiscopal rank by Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York. At 51, Archbishop O'Boyle will be one of fthe youngest archbishops in the United States.

Myron C. Taylor, President Truman's special representative at the Vatican, Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York and former governor, Herbert H. Lehman, first Director General of the United National Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, will be among those to witness the colorful rites.

Other Faiths Represented

Other guests will be representatives of Protestant, Jewish and Catholic organizations with which Monsignor O'Boyle has been associated in his work in charitable and welfare fields. Prior to his appointment as archbishop he was director of New York Catholic Charities.

At the consecration, Cardinal Spellman will be assisted by Bishops John M. McNamara, pastor of St. Gabriel's Church, Washington, and Henry T. Klonowski, auxiliary bishop of Scranton, closest friend of the new archbishop since boyhood.

In New York today Washington newsmen had an impromptu chat with the archbishop-elect. They were standing in the corridor of the building at 477 Madison ave., which houses Msgr. O'Boyle's office, when he walked in. He shook hands around, quipped about the New York weather which at that time was a teaming mixture of snow and rain.

He said that he had rehearsed tomorrow's ceremony once last Sunday night, and his mind was filled with the details of the ritual. He jokingly brushed aside leading questions pertaining to his new post, but said he would leave New York City Tuesday at 11:30 a. m. and arrive at Washington about 3:30 p. m. by Pennsylvania Railroad.

District Clergymen

More than 100 clergymen and laymen and women from greater Washington and Baltimore have accepted invitations to the consecration.

Included in the District clergy are Rt. Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, rector of Catholic University, who will act as assistant priest to Cardinal Spellman; Rt. Rev. John K. Cartwright, pastor of St. Matthews Cathedral, Washington, and Rt. Rev. John J. Russell, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, Washington, who will act as deacon of honor and special chaplain to Cardinal Spellman respectively.

Other greater Washington priests who will act as chaplains to the bishops at the ceremonies are: Rev. John Tracy Ellis, professor of history, Catholic University; Rev. Joseph Moran, pastor, St. Thomas Church; Rev. William E. Kelly, D. D., pastor St. Martin's Church; Rev. Neil J. Gargan, S. J., pastor of St. Aloysius Church; Rev. Henry F. Grabenstein, pastor Holy Comforter Church; Very Rev. Bernard Schaffer, O. P., pastor of St. Dominic's Church; Rev. John J. Coady, S. T. D., pastor St. Anthony's Church; Rev. Joseph T. Kennedy, pastor of St. John's Church, Forest Glen, Md.; Rev. William F. Stricker, Newport, Md., and Rev. Paul E. Meyer, Gaithersburg, Md.

In addition four archbishops, 43 bishops, including the Most Rev. Lawrence J. Shehan, D. D., former pastor of St. Patrick's Church, Washington, and now auxiliary bishop of Baltimore, and three abbots of religious orders are expected to be present.

Washingtonians who have accepted invitations include David J. Bowman, commander of the District of Columbia Catholic War Veterans; Henri Claudel, secretary to the French Ambassador; Sir Francis Evans, British Embassy; Gen. William J. Donovan, former wartime boss of the Office of Strategic Service and papal knight of the Order of St. Sylvester; Mrs. Ilene Fisher, Washington Catholic Daughters of America; Jane M. Hoye, director of public assistance, Social Security Board; Miss Ruth Craven, executive secretary, National Council of Catholic Women; Frank J. McCarthy, lawyer, Southern Building; Lawrence McDonnell, president of the Holy Names Society of Baltimore and Washington; Andrew P. Maloney, president of the National Alumni Association, Catholic University; G. Howland Shaw, former Assistant Secretary of State and president of the welfare council of New York, and James E. Markham, papal knight of Malta of 7609 Morningside dr. nw.

The consecration service will begin with a procession of clergy at 9:30 a. m. from the chapel of the Lady of New York, one of St. Patrick's many side chapels. The procession of more than 500 members of the Roman Catholic heirarchy, priests and religious orders will proceed down the right-hand aisle across the "porch" of the cathedral at the 5th ave. entrance and thence to the main altar.

Vestments Won by Pope

The vestments which Msgr. O'Boyle will wear were worn by Pope Pius XII when he was consecrated bishop by Pope Benedict XV. Cardinal Spellman also wore them when he was consecrated bishop.

Archbishop-elect O'Boyle will be installed at St. Matthew's Cathedral, Washington, by the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, January 21. He will reside at St. Patrick's rectory until an Episcopal residence is obtained.

The new archdiocese of Washington, established by Pope Pius XII, will include the District of Columbia and the Maryland counties of Montgomery, Prince Georges, St. Marys, Calvert and Charles. It has a catholic population of 165,000.

3 Inches Snow Plus 1.26 Rain Is 'Explained'

The Weatherman, who had forecast mild and cloudy skies for yesterday, had to wade through snow, slush and rain to measure the snow, slush and rain.

Results: Three inches of quickly-melting snow; 1.26 inches of rain.

The unexpected snow was due, the Weatherman explained, to a flow of cold air from the Northwest that proved too weak to displace warm, moist air streams over Maryland.

Chancing it again, he predicted today will be clear and colder, with a high of 35 degrees and an early-morning low of 26 degrees.

Yesterday's snow pelted the city heavily from 8:20 a. m. to 12:53 p. m., and was well mixed with rain in the latter stages.

A four-inch fall of snow, freezing slush and fog hit parts of Maryland, put plowing and cindering crews to work in several spots. Police said most county roads were passable. Another snowfall is due this afternoon, the Weather Bureau said.

A sub-zero wave hit the middle-West and snow sifted down from Iowa to the East coast. New Yoak and New England had heavy snow.

Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin had readings of 25 degrees below. Southern California had a heat wave—85 degrees in Los Angeles.

Peoples Bank Of Warrenton Elects A. L. Day

Warrenton, Va., Jan. 13 (Spl.).—Alan L. Day of Warrenton was elected president of the Peoples National Bank of Warrenton at the annual stockholders' meeting here today. He succeeds his father, the late D. Turner Day, who died December 13, 1947.

Mr. Day came to the bank in January, 1934, as assistant cashier from the Chase National Bank in New York City. He is a native of Fauquier County, attended Episcopal High School, Alexandria, and in 1924 studied business administration at Littlefield College in Cincinnati.

He became cashier of the Peoples National Bank in 1935, a position he held until today.

Peyton N. Brittle was elected cashier to fill the position vacated by the new president.

Rakeses Fail To Get Clear In Bank Case

Richmond, Va., Jan. 13 (AP).—Judge Johnson J. Hayes today refused to enter a judgment of not guilty against Hugh N. Rakes and his wife as the Government rested its case against the Leesburg (Va.) couple who are charged with aiding in the misapplication of nearly half a million dollars in bank funds.

Defense Attorney R. H. McNeill asserted the prosecution had failed to produce a "scintilla of evidence" that Mr. or Mrs. Rakes knew funds of the Farmers and Merchants State Bank at Fredericksburg were being misapplied.

McNeill embarked on a course designed to show the defendants had ample assets to cover notes held by the Fredericksburg bank at the time of its liquidation.

Judge Hayes, however, said he would rule tomorrow on the relevancy of defense attempts to show that Rakes had been a wealthy man, and that it was the fault either of the bank or the Federal Deposit Insurance Co. if money was lost in the disposal of the dairyman's notes held by the defunct bank.

Earlier, the Government rested its case after an FBI handwriting expert, William E. Davis, of Seattle, Wash., told the Federal District Court jury he "concluded" that signatures on notes held by the bank when it failed—notes bearing Rakes' guaranty—had been forged by Rakes.

Davis testified, however, that William Reeves Gardner, former vice president of the Fredericksburg bank, charged with the misapplication of the funds, had written most of the notes which the defense claims were worth $750,000, but were sold by the FDIC for $225,000.

Tobacco Lost in Fire Destroying Md. Barn

Prince Frederick, Md., Jan. 13 (AP).—A lot of smokes went up in smoke when Joseph Ireland's barn and the 5000 pounds of tobacco stored there were destroyed by fire.

Ireland also lost his stable and a horse. Another horse was injured but a cow was led to safety. The Calvert County Volunteer Fire Department answered the alarm yesterday but it was too late when the company arrived. Damage was estimated at about $3000.

Scout Official to Speak

Jury Sifts Dairy Firm Records in Milk Probe

50,000 Documents, Subpenaed From Washington Area Companies, Studied

First evidence in the grand jury investigation into possible criminal conspiracy to fix prices of dairy products in the Washington area has been subpenaed, George B. Haddock, special assistant to the Attorney General, said.

Evidence consisting of more than 50,000 documents, covers a wide field in operations of 11 dairy concerns in the Washington area.

Firms which Haddock said had their business transaction records subpenaed are Chestnut Farms, Thompson's, Embassy, Richfield, Wakefield, Highland Farms, Model Farms, Harvey, Arlington and Alexandria dairies, and the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association.

Documents which the special grand jury now is studying cover a period from 1941 through 1947, according to Haddock, and embrace such things as price lists, financial statements, production, processing and distribution information, and the dairies' correspondence with the producer association.

Haddock said records of the Lucerne Dairy, a subsidiary of the Safeway Stores, have "not yet" been subpenaed.

The investigation, launched last week, started with the milk inquiry, but is expected to include other food items.

Plan to Revise Va. Education Given to Tuck

Richmond, Va., Jan. 13 (AP).—The Virginia Advisory Legislative Council today gave Governor Tuck a pungently worded plan for revamping operations of the State Board of Education.

The unanimous report of the VALC group, headed by Delegate E. O. McCue, jr., contained seven recommendations for educational improvement.

The council proposed scrapping the manifold powers of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and recommended placing State schools under administration of a board of education headed by a full-time, paid chairman to be named by the Governor. It called the present system "top-heavy with supervisory and newly created positions."

"The young people of Virginia have not received the education which they have a right to expect for the amount which the taxpayers have contributed," said the report.

Made under direction of legislative resolutions, the council study presented other specific proposals for consideration of the Governor and members of the State Assembly, convening tomorrow.

These included:

1. Broadening the scholarship plan for students intending to become public school teachers.

2. Reorganization and rededication of Farmville, Radford and Madison State Teachers Colleges to their original functions of training school teachers rather than serving as liberal arts colleges.

3. Re-examination of salaries paid school teachers.

4. An increase in local contributions toward teacher salaries from 30 to 40 per cent.

5. Concentration of efforts towards a reasonable program of vocational education, instead of present "hobby shop" methods.

6. A sick leave program for teachers, providing five days with full pay for each session with a cumulative maximum of 20 days; absences up to three days with full pay when death occurs in the teacher's immediate family, and maternity leave for married teachers which would permit re-employment with no loss of tenure or position.

Quotes Exchanged, Jury Says Guilty

Shakespeare got into a case in Municipal Court yesterday—but he didn't help matters any.

In pleading the case of Charles E. Diggs, 37, of 26 Q st. ne., defense counsel Sumler Swancy quoted a passage from Hamlet:

"To thine own self be true, and it must follow as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man."

But Corporation Counsel Clark F. King took a dim view of this quotation. "I don't know how Shakespeare got into this case," he told the jury. "But I have a little quote I can offer: When you free the uilty you punish the innocent."

The jury took 20 minutes to decide Diggs had been guilty on three counts of indecent exposure. Complainants in the case were three 11-year-old girls, students at the Birney School where Diggs is janitor.

Rubber Need Stressed

Synthetic rubber production of 275,000 long tons a year for the next two years is the minimum requirement for national security.

That opinion was expressed last night by Dr. R. P. Dinsmore, vice president in charge of research and development for The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Akron, Ohio, a participant in a symposium held by the Chemical Engineers' Club.

A stockpile of natural rubber which may be as much as 800,000 long tons will also be required, he said.

Hurt in Boiler Blast

Lee Williams, 42, 1433 9th st. nw., was injured yesterday when a boiler exploded and caused a fire at the Bituminous Construction Co. on Greenbelt rd., Branchville, Md.

The explosion also damaged two trucks and destroyed a small office. Williams was taken to Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, and treated for face and hand burns. Cause of the explosion was not determined.

Paper Drive at Rockville

The Rockville Elemetary School Parent-Teachers Association will hold a paper drive in Rockville Sunday, beginning at 1 p. m. The P-TA asks that papers be tied in bundles and placed at the street curb. In case of rain or snow, the drive will be held the following Sunday.

Seal Sales Yield $10,000

Sale of Christmas Seals in Fairfax County last month has brought in $10,000, the County Tuberculosis Association reported yesterday.

Four Women Robbed

Four Washington women yesterday were victims of pocketbook snatchers, police reported.

Mrs. Jeneva Johnson, 27, of 214 T st. nw., told police that someone grabbed her from behind near her home, dragged her into an alley, struck her with his fist, then robbed her of her watch and $14.

Mrs. Minesa Ports, 648 Acker st. ne., reported she was in front of her home when she was knocked down by an 18-year-old youth who took her brown handbag, which contained $3.

A pocketbook containing $40 was snatched from under the arm of Mrs. Edith Ford, 130 13th st. se., while she was walking in front of 1318 Massachusetts ave. se., and Margaret Shelhorse, Seat Pleasant, Md., said her pocketbook was opened and a billfold containing $3 removed while she was riding a streetcar.

Hite Nursery to Stay Open

Mrs. Maude C. Hite, owner of the Hite Nursery School, yesterday received permission from the Montgomery County commissioners to continue operation of the school until at least June 30.

In deciding to grant a permit to Mrs. Hite, the commissioners said they were powerless under present laws to compel Mrs. Hite to close the school if she did not get a permit.

The school was in the limelight last September when a Washington couple claimed their two children were mistreated. Their complaints led to a police investigation of the school which revealed Mrs. Hite had been operating without either State or county permit.

Riders to Hear Bus Plans

Plans of the Arnold Bus Lines to improve its service will be outlined to members of the Arlington Bus Riders Association in a meeting tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the band room of Washington and Lee High School, 4035 N. 13th st.

Group President Francis J. Ortman said he had invited the County Public Utilities Commission and the Arnold Lines to send representatives.

Browne Annex Record

One third of the Negro Browne Junior High School pupils assigned to Blow and Webb annexes attended classes yesterday.

Many parents protesting the use of the two former white elementary schools as annexes have kept their children out of the two buildings since December 3.

Of 552 students assigned to Blow and Webb in the morning, 186 were in attendance yesterday. Of the afternoon shift of 579 students, 117 were in school. On Monday 222 were at Blow and Webbb in the morning and 175 in the afternoon.

Tax Sales Sought

District Tax Collector Guy W. Pearson said last night he would seek authority to sell to the highest bidder a number of real estate pieces on which delinquent taxes are due.

His statement came at the close of this year's delinquent real estate tax sale, held yesterday at the District Building, during which private bidders paid about $95,000 back taxes on approximately 1100 pieces of property.

A total of 2580 pieces of property were involved in the sale, of which about 1480 reverted to the District because no one offered to pay the back taxes.

Property owners must pay the taxes and a 1 per cent a month penalty witin two years or the certificate holder may obtain title to the property.

Mrs. Roosevelt to Speak

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt will address the Women's National Press Club at a Statler Hotel luncheon today on "The Human Rights Commission and the Citizen." Radio stations WINX and WINX-FM will broadcast her talk at 1:45 p. m.

Pearl Necklace Stolen

A pearl necklace valued at $200 and incidental possessions she thought were worth $34 have been stolen from the apartment of Mrs. Frank Bonner, 20, of 2480 16th st. nw., she told police yesterday.

Boy Misses Dog

When Duke was a very small dog of about two months, he used to squeeze between the slats of Cliff's play pen and lovingly lick his playmate's face. As Cliff and Duke grew up, they shared the same toys, nibbled off the same cookies. They were inseparable.

Cliff

Cliff's mother, Mrs. Tom Rowland, didn't have any fears about leaving Cliff out of doors, because Duke, a black cocker spaniel, was always there, growling at passers-by, and nudging Cliffback into home territory if he wandered off.

That was the situation until last Saturday, when Duke wandered off the Rowland property at 103 E. George Mason dr. in Falls Church, Va. He wasn't wearing his dog tag or collar. Cliff has been looking for him everywhere, calling him in the treble of a boy of 16 month.

If you've seen Duke, won't you take him back home?

Tax Lectures Planned

The District Bar Association will sponsor a lecture course on Federal taxation. More than 250 members, meeting last night at the Mayflower Hotel, voted almost unanimous approval of a report by Lloyd Harrison, taxation committee chairman.

Testimony Studied

Testimony produced in public hearings on charges that Greenbelt town officials had mismanaged town affairs will be discussed in executive session tomorrow night by the Greenbelt Citizens Committee.

Mayor Thomas J. Canning said findings probably will not be made public until some time next month. Town Manager James T. Gobbel was accused of ordering too much pay for himself and Chief of Police George Panagoulis was accused of negligence.

Named for Chest Post

Edgar F. Czarra, University Park, has been nominated for president of the Community Chest and Planning Council of Prince Georges County, T. Howard Duckett, chairman of the nominating committee, announced yesterday.

Elections will be held at the meeting of the chest and council January 26 at 8 p. m. in the County Service Building, Hyattville.

Baltimore Courts Crack Down on Racing Operators

Baltimore, Jan. 13 (AP).—A crackdown on gambling and roistering, inspired by recent grand jury pronouncements, brought a continuation of fines and the pressing of criminal charges in courts today.

For the second day in a row, Judge Herman M. Moser imposed a $1000 fine on a convicted bookmaker. Another was assessed $650 and seven others were fined $500 each.

"There is no law licensing gambling in Maryland," commented Judge Mose. "Maybe some new rules of the turf should be issued for the guidance of the sporting gentry."

Judge Moser yesterday imposed $1000 fines on two bookmakers. Many times in the past such defendents have been let off with suspended sentences.

Meantime, Magistrate James H. Ellis, jr., bound over for grand jury action the proprietor and a woman employe of a "milk bar" raided Saturday morning.

Arizona Ave. Plan Stirs Up Free-for-All

Citizens and officials staged a free-for-all at the Capitol yesterday over the proposed Arizona ave. dual highway in northwest Washington.

Citizens and official groups were so divided that Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.), chairman of the subcommittee handling the plan, said no action will be taken until after February 2, and the record will be kept open until then for anyone to file statements.

This delay was asked by Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, so the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which he heads, may study the proposal at its meeting January 29-30.

The proposed Arizona ave. highway would run through what is now park area, along Foundry Branch, from Canal rd. nw. to Wisconsin ave. nw., near Tenley Circle. Some groups want the area kept for park and recreation use, and others want a high-speed traffic artery from the far Northwest area via the developing K st. elevated highway into downtown Washington.

Beall, whose congressional district starts with Montgomery County and runs to the western end of Maryland, indicated strong interest in the effect of the proposed highway on Maryland-District travel, said he would state no conclusion until after the record is completed. Legislation for the project is sponsored by Senator Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.) and Representative John R. Murdock (D., Ariz.).

Mrs. Ann Archbold, who gave 28 acres of the park land over which the highway would run, and Charles C. Glover, jr., whose father gave 77½ acres, both protested the highway project, saying the land was given for park and recreation purposes and should be left that way.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District Director of Highways, read the Commissioners' acceptance of the land about 23 years ago, in which they reserved the right to run streets through it if necessary. The highway is necessary, he contended, and recreational value of the area would be greatly increased if it were made accessible by the highway.

Mrs. Mary L. Kenworthy of Hardy School Home Association said, "It is accessible by streetcar, by bus, by auto, and by foot."

Gordon M. Atherholt said the Northwest Council of Citizens Associations favors the highway. Rear Admiral C. S. Stephenson said the Foxhall Village Association had polled 93 residents and all oppose it. Foxhall Village adjoins the park.

Edward V. Grosvenor said the Glover Park Citizens Association voted unanimously against the highway.

Washington I. Cleveland, American Automobile Association District manager, and Arthur G. Harnett, Westchester Apartments managing director, where Commissioner Mason lives, favored the highway.

Whitehurst and D. S. Brinkley, District highway planning engineer, presented charts showing Arizona ave. would be designed to take from Wisconsin ave., Massachusettes ave., Canal rd. and Reservoir rd. about all the excess traffic predicted between now and 1990, permitting a trip from Tenley Circle to 21st and K sts nw. with only one grade intersection. It would take about three years for the job, and cost about $3,400,000.

Auto Accident Victim Sues U. S.

Baltimore, Jan. 13 (AP).—Leonard E. Johnson of Jamestown, N. Y., today filed a $75,000 suit against the Federal Government asking damages for injuries he suffered in an automobile accident near Oxon Hill, Md., last May.

Johnson alleged the car in which he was riding ran off the completed portion of a Government-built roadway in the Washington, D. C., suburb, and resulted in a fractured skull, loss of hearing in one ear, double vision, and an injured back.

He contended the Government was negligent in not maintaining warning lights and signs at the end of the pavement.

Va. U. Fraternity Group Reforms

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 13 (AP). The Interfraternity Council of the University of Virginia has reorganized to include only the presidents of fraternities, and last night approved a resolution acknowledging the rules of conduct as passed by the Board of Visitors December 12 and recognizing them as "the laws of the university."

Joseph C. Carter of Mayfield, Ky., who was reelected president, said the resolution did not affect the council's appeal from the regulations filed Friday.

The appeal has been placed before the administration of the university, which will make recommendations to the Board of Visitors.

Cocks Candidate From 4th Virginia District

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 13 (AP).—T. Robert Cocks, production manager of the Farmers Co-operative Fertilizer Co. of Kenbridge, today accepted the Republican nomination for Congressman from the Fourth Virginia District.

Cocks was nominated at a meeting of GOP yeaders Saturday in Petersburg, but had not announced his decision as to whether he would run.

Three Democrats are in the field for the February 17 vote—State Senator Morton G. Goode of Dinwiddie; Commonwealths' Attorney Watkins M. Abbitt of Appomattox and Commonwealth's Attorney Robert W. Arnold of Sussex.

Daylight Time For District Asked in House

Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) yesterday asked the House to let Washington have daylight saving time every summer.

Klein, a member of the House District Committee, introduced a bill to authorize the District Commissioners to put daylight saving time into effect each year from the last Sunday of April to the last Sunday of September.

Washington, after a late start, got daylight saving time last summer, but the law permitting it was good for one summer only.

Plans for annual daylight saving time have already received one setback this year—Senator George W. Malone (R., Nev.) blocked Senate action Monday on the daylight saving bill of Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R.I.). The Senate bill has the same purpose as Klein's.

Klein said in a statement that "the benefits of daylight saving for the people of the District were proved last summer beyond all douht.

"The minor inconveniences caused by trains that ran and cows that gave milk on standard time only were more than balanced by the opportunity given thousands of Federal employes and other workers for healthful relaxation in daylight hours."

Klein said he is "confident that the mild flurry of opposition to my daylight saving time bill of last year has completely died out."

The House voted once last year against daylight saving for Washington, then followed the lead of the Senate and agreed to let the Commissioners put it into effect for the one summer.

3 New Directors Elected to Board Of Peoples Bank

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 13 (Spl.).—Three new directors were added to the board of the Peoples National Bank at Leesburg at the annual meeting of stockholders here today.

The Loudoun National Bank added one new director while the Round Hill National Bank, the Farmers and Merchants National Bank at Hamilton and the Purcellville National Bank reelected directors.

Elected to the board of the Peoples Bank were C. R. Ahalt, W. H. Cockerille and James L. McIntosh. Other members were reelected. Officers' election will held at a meeting of directors Thursday.

J. Emory Kirkpatrick of Ashburn was elected a director of the Loudoun bank. Other directors and officers were reelected.

Officers of the Round Hill and Farmers and Marchants banks were reelected. The Purcellville Bank will elect officers Thursday.

Gasoline Truck Overturns, Fire Backs Up Traffic

Centerville, Va., Jan. 13 (Spl.).—The wreck of a flaming gasoline truck today backed up traffic for more than a mile on Route 211, 1 mile east of this Fairfax County town.

The westbound tractor truck, driven by Kenneth C. Mallon, 21, of 2002 S. 27th st., Arlington, skidded shortly before noon in slush when it tried to pass on the divided four-lane highway.

The truck then lurched over the grass dividing strip and toppled on its side across the eastbound lane.

Flames promtly flared up in pools of leaking gasoline. Volunteer firemen sprayed chemicals over the blaze for more than an hour before traffic, including a funeral procession, could move again.

Fellowship Breakfast

The International Reform Federation will sponsor its fifty-third annual fellowship breakfast tomorrow at 9 a. m. in the Senate dining room. A devotional service will be held in the Capitol rotunda at 8:30 a. m.

Among the breakfast speakers will be Senators and Representatives; bishops and other clergy.

D. C. Boy and Girl Chosen as Typical By Dental Group

An energetic youth who "sure would like to be a newspaperman," and a lovely girl of 17, who plans a career, were selected yesterday as representative of the "typical Amrican boy and girl."

Those chosen, from a field of 16 contenders, were: Miss Susan M. Finn of 111 Quincy st., Chevy Chase, Woodrow Wilson High School senior, and Gilbert B. Snyder, 17, of 3116 S. 14th st., Arlington, Central High School senior.

Dr. M. H. Burton, chairman of the postgraduate clinic of the District Dental Society, which sponsored the contest among local high school students, said selections were made on a basis of scholarship, Americanism, school activities and oral health.

The students were chosen by a panel of three judges following a luncheon at Hotel Shoreham.

Va. Local Officials Urged to Act on Beach Erosion

By The Associated Press

Federal aid in beach erosion control in Virginia must be sought through local government units rather than through organizations and individuals, Representative Bland (D., Va.) said yesterday.

The Virginia State Highway Department, Norfolk and Virginia Beach are among applicants for cooperative studies, Bland said he is informed. The highway department, he added, is interested in erosion at Colonial Beach, where a State highway is endangered.

"I am informed," Bland said in a statement, "that there is no State law in the State of Virginia dealing with erosion. Probably the laws or charters establishing town, city and county governments may grant powers and functions sufficiently broad to enable them to enter into studies of beach erosion."

Bland said individuals or organizations of private owners are not eligible to apply directly to Army Engineers for studies.

Highway Cut Residents May Get More Relief

Residents of the 6500 and 6600 blocks of Eastern ave. ne., where the District recently built a highway that left their homes perched on the top of a deep cut, yesterday had new hopes for relief.

James R. Kirkland, counsel for the Senate District Committee, announced a bill is to be introduced which would increase the amounts they were paid under condemnation proceedings eight years ago.

The residents, as a result of the new roadway, have been forced to transfer their water and sewage connections from the town of Takoma Park, Md., to the District. In addition, some found it necessary to build concrete retaining walls—at costs up to $5000—to prevent their homes from sliding onto the highway.

Dr. McClosky Dies; Famed Biochemist

Dr. William T. McClosky, 58, internationally known Government authority on biochemistry and a leader for 20 years in the local Catholic Boy Scout movement, died at his home, 5120 7th st. nw., Monday.

He died from an embolism (blood clot in an artery) following years of suffering from diabetes. Only a year ago, after a leg amputation to slow the ravages of the disease, he purchased a special automobile to enable him to continue his work.

A Government pharmacologist since 1922, Dr. McClosky was best known for his work in standardizing ptuitrin, that is, establishing its tests for standard manufacture. At the time of his death he was experimenting wih the use of streptomycin and promine in treating tuberculosis as part of his work with the National Institute of Health, Bethesda, Md.

Born in the District, Dr. McClosky received his early education here, later attending St. Charles College, Catonsville, Md., and Georgetown Preparatory School. He received his medical degree from the University of Maryland in 1922, taking his A. B. at George Washington University in 1925.

In 1922, he joined the United States Public Health Service as pharmacologist, transferring in 1929 to the Food and Drug Administration, where he served as chief of the pharmacology division. He returned to USPHS in March, 1944, when he accepted the assignment at the health institute.

Service to Scouting

An Eagle Scout himself, he was awarded the Archbishop's Medal by the late Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, in 1940 for distinguished service to scouting. The National Capital Area Council of Boy Scouts conferred on him its highest honor, Silver Beaver, in 1936. He served as an executive board member for the area council.

Dr. McClosky was a member of the American Society of Pharmacology and Experimental Therapeutics, the American Pharmaceutical Association, the Society of Experimental Biology and Medicine, the Washington Lay Alumni Association of St. Charles College,

New Jewelry Follows Edwardian Patterns

It's back to Edwardian times as far as the new jewelry is concerned. Diamond dog collars, tiaras, brooches like headlights and earrings with long dangles are all in again, according to jewelers, and let these words of wisdom light the way for rhinestone shoppers, too.

That gadgety little clip or pin—long on whimsy and short on the price tag—is no longer calculated to light a lady's eyes. The new clothes don't take to jewelry antics. Important in their lines and lavish in their luxurious fabrics, they cry out for the classics.

When in doubt about jewelry picking—precious or otherwise—settle for something simple in silhouette, like a big circle or a crescent pin, advises John Rubel, jeweler. This concentrated kind of blaze holds its own better with the new clothes than broken-up glitter touches, he believes.

Necklaces or lavallieres are no longer reserved for dowager duchesses, Mr. Rubel says. Another of the Edwardian comebacks, they are musts for the new evening clothes all down the age line to subdebs and all down the price line from diamonds to rhinestones.

Diamonds set with pearls are another big revival, Mr. Rubel notes, and if you're hoarding some of both in your safety deposit vault, the thing is to get them out and have them woven together for the new-old jewelry look. A necklace alternating a diamond and a pearl is tops and, luckily, news of this heavenly teamwork has already sifted down to your favorite budget jewelry counter.

Excitement over dinner rings, built up into high mounds of jewels, also counts on the Edwardian side. The setting beneath them is still old-fashioned, shining gold and nothing to do with the modern white metals.

With things turning so Edwardian around his shop, Mr. Rubel contemplates a few revivals of his own. One is a combination dog collar-necklace, half of which will clip around the throat, the other half lie flat around the collar bone. Contemporary touch—they'll be detachable, so that the owner can settle for either one or both. He's in doubt about trying to popularize the jeweled stomacher, but thinks it may have a future still.

For Loose Ends

A splendid manicure acid is made by putting one teaspoon of lemon juice into a cup of hot water. It will remove stains from the fingers and nails and loosen the cuticle beautifully. Use an orange stick having absorbent cotton wrapped around the end.

Paste It Down

Don't tear off the piece of leather where your shoe has been scuffed. With a little colorless liquid nail polish flatten the piece into place. After this has been done the scuffed part will scarcely show.

Red Cross Needs Volunteers to Train as Gray Ladies

A CLASS for Gray Ladies will be held during the month of February at Naval Medical Center, Bethesda. This is the first time a set has been trained at Medical Center during the winter months. Till now, the June class of Gray Ladies has been the one class of the year.

Mrs. H. J. S. Aitchison, chairman of the D. C. Red Cross Gray Ladies, announces that the February class will need 30 volunteers, 20 to be trained in arts and crafts and 10 to be trained in shopping guidance for the patients.

Residents of the District especially interested, who are between the ages of 21 and 55, are asked to call the D. C. Red Cross Gray Lady Service at Republic 8300, extension 290 or 476, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 4 p. m.

Instruction given every Wednesday during the first three weeks will be followed by an indefinite period of provisional training in hospitals. Upon completion of training, Gray Ladies are asked to serve one day a week between the hours of 10 and 4.

Additional Gray Ladies are required at this time because opening of the new Blood Donor Center has drawn Gray Ladies from other posts and also because Gray Ladies have recently been added to the Red Cross Motor Corps cars which carry crippled children to hospitals for treatment.

At Gallinger, Garfield, Children's and Episcopal Hospitals and at the Home for Incurables, where Gray Ladies are specially needed, completion of provisional training is not required.

Mrs. David E. Finley is chairman of Volunteer Special Services of the District Red Cross. Among the Gray Ladies serving regularly at Naval Medical Center are Mrs. George W. Calver, Mrs. Ross McIntire, Mrs. John Custis, Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Paul Shorb and Mrs. Arthur MacArthur.

Giving the Baby Good Health

The best gift a mother gives her baby is health, clear eyes, sound limbs, strong lungs . . . and according to doctors, there are four ways to protect baby against most diseases.

ONE: Feed the baby enough clean, nutritious, digestible food.

TWO: Keep the baby away from sick people.

FOUR: Pay special attention to your own health, as the mother, before birth and during the nursing period.

A cold may be a serious threat to the delicate baby, so every precaution should be taken to protect him. When the mother has a cold she should wear a gauze mask or tie a handkerchief over her nose and mouth when near the baby and wash her hands more carefully than usual.

Loving friends and relatives with colds should be kept away from the baby's room and preferably out of the house entirely.

Whether your baby is yet to be born or already has the house in a turmoil, our Reader Service booklet No. 203 is a valuable guide to baby care from birth through the problems of teething, eating, exercise, illness and accidents.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Facing Prospect of Visit From Her Married Older Brother, Happy Young Wife Is Gripped With Inferiority Feelings He Always Evokes

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I appeal to you for advice on my problem, which is a sudden overwhelming inferiority complex whenever I see my brother Bill, who is three years my senior and has always treated me with the indulgent condescension usually accorded a harmless moron.

He graduated from high school with honors and I graduated a year later (at a slightly precocious age) with even more honors. While he did well in college, I did even better, winning a beauty and popularity contest to boot. But whereas his success thrilled me and I praised him highly, my success was never mentioned.

Bill married a grand girl with a typical Irish wit and temperament. I like her a lot but she affects me the same way he does. They surround themselves with a tight little circle of clever witty friends who seem always to share some private joke. My friends are of all ages and types.

I am very happily married to a fine man, have two lovely children and much else to be thankful for, and this problem sounds silly to me as I try to define it. However, we are expecting Bill and Kay for a visit soon, after not seeing each other for two years, and I don't want my pleasure in the visit spoiled by this stupid complex.

Doesn't Think It's Jealousy

WHEN our first child was born I allowed some of my joy to creep into my first letter to them, but their reply was so filled with gentle amusement that I felt like the ridiculously proud parents in cartoons and thereafter in writing just briefly mentioned baby's health. Now that they have become parents, their letters are hilarious accounts of the infant's precocity.

We have achieved as great, if not greater, financial success than they, although material things have never been of prime importance to me. And Bill is such a fine character that I can't believe there is any petty jealousy or attempt to deflate my ego.

It isn't as if I had waged a contest with Bill or ever referred to my own accomplishments. I even feel the urge to hide them from him, as if they might hurt his feelings, although there is no reason for it. Perhaps I am just hypersensitive where he is concerned, but my younger brother, with whom I am very close, reacts as I do. Thank you for any insight and help you may give me. E. G.

Man's Attitude Is Competitive

DEAR E. G.: There is striving for supremacy here, but mostly in Bill's unconscious, I think. Your birth gave him no joy. Rather he resented your arrival on the scene, second in line, because in various ways thereafter it impinged upon and frustrated his erstwhile satisfied, unrivalled, imperious claim to exclusive adulation from mother or nannie.

Hence from earliest awareness you sensed a strong emanation of disapproval from him; and always you have wanted intensely to impress him favorably, not from rival motivation but to win him over, as it were, from his deprecating rejecting attitude which weighed mysteriously on your spirit, causing you to feel anxious, defensive, supplicating, inexplicably guilty in relation to him.

If your younger brother feels much the same reaction, it doubtless means that he, too, came in for a share of Bill's derisive displeasure at being dethroned and democratized, more or less, as the family multiplied.

Also the fact that Bill's manner suggests ironic indulgence of morons, and that you two are habitually deflated by it, indicates a tacit general understanding in childhood that he was unmistakeably his mother's favorite—since it is the child thus favored, even though subtly, who intangibly lords it over brothers and sisters, even though the latter may be basically abler and more gifted than he.

Time to Discard Childish Rubbish

THIS is my interpretation of the significance or causation of your so-called overwhelming inferiority complex in relation to Bill. And the cure consists in a thorough housecleaning of your feelings about him, a shake-up that is long overdue.

So for advice: Discard as rubbish your old childish awestruck idealization of him and aspiration to wrest accolade from him. And do this by the sane device of appraising him through mature objective eyes, in the light of experience, and seeing him realistically for what he is, namely: a smug self-centered, competitive and ungenerous, rather shallow and insensitive person.

The best way to make a hit on Bill is to be fully as self satisfied, or call it as self accepting, as he is. So in vis-a-vis dealings hereafter, rest on the laurels of your achievements endorsed by others, and don't give a darn what he thinks, says or does of patronizing import. M. H.

Suits Dress Up With Frills and 'Folderol Hips'

By Dorothy Roe

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (AP).—Girls who have gone in for mannish suits should do a quick about-face this spring, or be left behind in the leap year race.

Ruffles and frills and "folderol hips" are the theme of 1948 fashions, as unveiled for the visiting fashion press in the second day of a week crowded with style showings. Necklines plunge lower as hemlines drop, petticoats rustle an accompaniment to dress-up clothes, and suits are of the dressmaker type, with flowing collars, nipped-in waistlines and rippled peplums.

Omar Kiam, of the house of Ben Reig, introduces "folderol hips" in his current collection, using the term to denote the accented hipline acheived by means of subtle cut and drape instead of padding. For cocktail and evening wear Kiam likes off-shoulder styles with very full skirts, uses imported laces with a lavish hand, and spotlights a new type of day-or-evening wrap called the "cocoon jacket." This is a minute waist-length affair wrapped around the cocoon manner, and shown in pastel fleece.

Suits Are Stressed

Brownie, of the firm of Foxbrownie, shows a series of couture suits, consisting of matching or harmonizing dresses and jackets, stressing the fact that a suit is not merely a jacket and skirt, but a complete costume in which the blouse is an important part of the picture.

The "throw coat" is an important part of the Brownie daytime picture, being a short bright circular wool coat used in ensemble with gay spring print dresses. The coat also may double as an evening jacket.

Oyster Gray Favored

For formal evening wear Brownie chooses oyster gray as her favorite color of the season, presents a grand finale of a group of evening gowns all in the same soft tone, some in taffeta, some in crepe, some in chiffon and lace.

Joseph Whitehead, famous for evening gowns and engligees, outdoes himself this year in the opulence of his collection of dramatic formal gowns, mostly strapless, with 30-yard skirts.

THE restoration of feminine elegance to the American fashion scene is the theme of Anthony Blotta's spring collection, as proved by this lush rose and green changeable taffeta evening gown with a matching stole with fluted self-frills

Mme. van Kleffens, Mrs. Luther 'to Air' Views on Holland

Mme. Eelco van Kleffens, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador to the United States, who says "You don't feel that American women carry on their outside activities at the expense of their home life," joins Mrs. Lloyd Luther of the League of Women Voters international relations committee, in a "Woman's Eye-View of Holland," over the Columbia network today. They speak from WTOP in Washington at 6:15 p. m. In Washington they will be heard (via transcription) at 11:15 p. m. of the same day.

Mme. van Kleffens and Mrs. Luther will discuss the contrasting customs of Dutch and American women.

Series of Teas At Little Shop Will Aid China

People are beginning to discover that the little shop at 1606 20th st., headquarters for United Service to China, is carrying on where the bazaar, held recently at the Chinese Embassy, left off.

Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, acting chairman of the Washington committee, is inaugurating a series of teas, the first of which is to be held tomorrow at 4:30 when Mme. Koo, wife of the Ambassador of China, will be the honor guest. Mrs. Timothy Mar will be hostess on January 19, Mrs. Harold Coolidge on January 27, Mrs. Deborah Glassford on the 28th and Mrs. David McD. LeBreton on the 30th. A similar series will be held during the months of February and March.

The bazaar importers in New York have been replenishing the stock at the shop with precious blends of tea, Peking blue glass goblets, character dolls, hand-painted trays, a wide assortment of party favors, elephant bells, scarf rings, linens, rice china, inexpensive bowls, children's books and toys.

California Shows 'Uncluttered L ook'

By Robert B. Tuckman

Los Angeles, Jan. 13 (AP).—California's fashion stylists unveiled today the "uncluttered look" for milady's spring and summer wear.

That's a modified "new look" in women's clothing displayed by 130 manufacturers of "California apparel creators" at a show sponsored by the organization.

"There is a new simplicity about the spring and summer styles," a spokesman explained. "A casual air that has a simplicity of sweep, an uncluttered look.

"From the first Victorian trend and a slightly rococo look, the 'new look' has adjusted itself to the streamlined age and developed a new casual grace, a soft femininity without exaggeration."

"Without exaggeration" means skirt hemlines are 12 to 14 inches from the floor instead of longer, not quite as full as heretofore but retaining a "provocative swish."

"A girl can get on and off a street car with them," was one stylist's explanation.

The "exaggeration" still applies to low necklines for evening clothes, however. They are "very deep," the more daring ones terminating at the mid-riff and some of them with a "fill of nude (flesh-tone) lace."

Colors are more subdued "with a definite leaning to all tones of white, a rich creamy banana yellow, copper and redwood."

E. W. Stewart, head of the sponsoring organization, said manufacturers anticipate booking 12 million dollars in orders before the show ends tomorrow night. More than 1200 buyers from all parts of the country are attending.

Attracting more than passing attention is the "two-mile swimsuit," which the manfacturer claims can be seen two miles away.

Commented one prospective buyer:

"It's one thing to attract a man from two miles away but can you hear him whistle that far?"

Resort Shoes Bare Pretty Feet

Newest vogue in resort shoe fashion is the barest of bare sandals, according to St. Louis shoe stylists.

These wispy models that cling to the soles by mere threads of gold dress your foot up by the simple device of "undressing" it. "These thongs and sandals, revealing the graceful contours of the wearer's foot, have all the daintiness, femininity and delicacy that the most 'covered' town shoe does," according to one stylist.

It is a mood that is important these days, he says, and the very bare or the very covered shoe both have it, so long as they are light and graceful in lines.

Other style and color preferences are also noted by St. Louis designers for "going South" wardrobes. The rest of us can take a cue from these style notes to begin planning our summer buys, for resort vogues have long set styles for the following summer.

Pink suede is "walking right out of the stores" in Miami, for example. Heavy resort orders are also being received for gold and for white suede combined with gold.

Spectator models are far more dressy than formerly. Instead of the conventional "sporty" two-tones, resort wearers want dainty straps, pastel trim, graceful, high-sweeping vamps, higher, more slender heels.

Hard on Suede Shoes

Avoid as much as possible covering the suede shoe with galoshes or overshoes as it flattens down the leather and is apt to make them look spotted. Wear your kid shoes on bad days and save the suede for clear weather.

What About Souvenirs?

Stories Spill Over the Dams To Congress; Ann Barley Adopts Sister for Patrick

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

AN AMUSING teapot tempest is whirling around Boulder Dam. The reservoir of the huge dam, 115 miles long and the World's largest artificial body of water, was commenced under Herbert Hoover, originally bore his name. When our last GOP President dropped into political limbo land, Hoover was discarded, the incredible engineering project was called Boulder Dam after a giant rock jutting over the dam site. This past summer, with Republicans feeling their oats, Boulder Dam was rechristened Hoover Dam by an act of Congress. Since then, Senators, Representatives from Nevada and Arizona (the dam's on a State line) have been beleaguered by a swarm of angry Boulder City and Las Vegas merchants. All of them, it seems rake in a tidy income selling souvenirs! And they're stocked with thousands and thousands of dollars worth of knick-knacks all labeled "Boulder Dam" in absolutely ineradicable letters. The fuss sounds far fetched, but last year one and a half million tourists peeked over the dam which, from the water surface, rises higher than Washington Monument. Most of them, in a vacation-spending mood, are eager to part with a few bucks for burnt leather mottos, knives, pen wipers and felt sofa cushions. This runs into handsome money. Meanwhile, Senators like Nevada's George Malone (a big guy who sails under false colors with the nickname "Molly") are sitting tight, letting the souvenir storm lap over them! Incidently, it is de rigueur to name important dams after Presidents. Muscle Shoals' real name is Wilson Dam and in Arizona there is one called Roosevelt, after Theodore, not Franklin.

Sen. Malone

Andrea Comes to Georgetown

REMEMBER, a year or so ago, Ann Barley, the attractive Detroit girl who caused quite a stir by returning to Washington with a French war orphan she had adopted? Well, Miss Barley is still here, in a nice Georgetown house and about six months ago she became a "mama" for the second time by adopting another orphan, 20-month-old Andrea, as sister to 2½-year-older Patrick.

So many people contacted Ann Barley, asked her whys, wherefors, hows and results of her ready-made family that she was forced to take time out, write a book. It is called "Patrick Calls Me Mother" and Harper's will publish it in May.

There is nothing particularly complicated about Ann's acquisition of Patrick. A free lance radio writer, she had worked wartimes with the Army turning out scripts, helping production of those immense Army shows which toured the country. She must have been good, because she was decorated with our country's highest civilian award. Then, getting herself accredited to a Chicago newspaper, she went overseas as a correspondent, almost immediately decided she'd help in a practical way by adopting an orphan. She spent so much time looking for just the right child, she never wrote a line! First she went to Holland, but Dutch laws offer foster parents no real protection. In Paris she found 9-month-old Patrick, a baby with "real" personality. During the two months it took to fix the necessary papers, Ann Barley determined to adopt a baby girl. Because she left France before the little girl's documents were in order, our immigration quota from France was filled and it took a year to get Andrea here. Fortunately, Ann has an independent income, a sympathetic family and the "experiment," if you can call it that, has been a great success. She knows several people who have followed her example. One lady, on her way to a cocktail party, happened into her house by mistake, fell for Patrick, ended by sailing to France, adopting a child from the same orphan home. If Ann should marry? She isn't averse to the idea, but says her husband would have to be crazy about children.

Lecture Provides Spot of Gardening

JUST about this time of year everyone, or almost everyone, gets a yen to do a spot of gardening. To satisfy this desire without the inconvenience of chilblains or chapped hands the feminine powers that be in Washington Cathedral affairs have arranged a series of eight lectures on gardening. Starting February 4, ending March 24, they will be given at 11 a. m. in the St. Albans Guild Hall and will benefit the Cathedral gardens. First lecture will be "Why a Garden," with B. Y. Morrison of the Government experimental station in Beltsville, lecturing. The last is on flower arrangements, demonstrated by Mrs. Herbert W. Gregor. In between there's just about everything from bulbs to cactus. The course costs $15, and Mrs. McCook Knox at 3259 N st. nw., gladly accepts checks.

Says Price Controls or Depression Is Choice

By Genevieve Reynolds

"Reimposition of consumer credit, price control, rationing and allocation of special products are the only sure means of controlling inflation," declared R. M. Evans, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, in a luncheon address yesterday before members of the D. C. League of Women Voters.

Speaking on "Inflation—What Can We Do About It?" he told the group that the American people have two choices—return to controls or let high prices run their course until they cause another depression.

Pointing out that personal savings plunged from about 15 billion dollars in 1946 to around 11 billion in 1947, Mr. Evans warned that if inflation takes its natural course the bulk of Americans will have exhausted their savings and purchasing power by the time deflation arrives.

Risk to government is too great to permit another boom-burst period, he cautioned. "Such a condition might call for action as drastic as the 1930s", he explained. "And it's not the same world. The conflict is of greater magnitude than most people realize."

An economic collapse here would mean that the United States could not aid the peoples of the world depending upon her. Also it might cause the collapse of the democratic way of life.

What with everyone pulling in the largest income in all history and the scarcity of many goods, now is the time people should save and refrain from going into debt, according to Mr. Evans.

When asked if the Marshall Plan would add to inflation, he answered, "Yes," in so far as the demand for goods here exceeds the supply, but that the urgent need for European recovery is so great that it is worth whatever small inflation it might cause."

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

"Inflation won't be cured until each person says, 'I am willing to do my share'," R. M. Evans, member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System (left) tells Mrs. John F. Thomas, president of the D. C. League of Women Voters. Occasion was the league's luncheon yesterday at the YWCA when Mr. Evans appeared as guest speaker

Preceding the program, Mrs. John F. Thomas, local league president, told the members that the Auchincloss bill for District home rule had been introduced in the House of Representatives this week and added, "This is what the league has been waiting for a long time."

Chairman Auchincloss To Address AAUW

Chairman Auchincloss of the House Subcommittee on Home Rule for the District and Mrs. Auchincloss will be guests of honor at a dinner meeting tonight of the Washington branch, American Association of University Women at the AAUW clubhouse. Your Question On Homemaking

A GAY new fruit topping for the breakfast oatmeal is Cherry Jubilee Sauce. To speed breakfast work, it can be prepared the night before. Drain sirup from 1 pint of canned red cherries and heat it to the boiling point. Thicken with 2 tablespoons cornstarch, blended with 1 tablespoon sugar. Boil gently over low heat for 10 to 12 minutes, stirring to prevent burning, until mixture becomes very thick. Cook thickened sirup to warm, pour over the drained cherries a half hour before serving so cherries will become plump and rich-looking

Can you give me the measurements for all the pieces of a place mat set? B. H.

The standard measurement for individual place mats is 18 by 12 inches. The center runner for a four-place set should be 24 by 16 inches, and for a six-place set, 36 by 16 inches. Luncheon size napkins should be 12 inches square and the dinner size can be either 20 or 22 inches square.

I have two luncheon sets of Guatemalan cotton which have not yet been used. I am wondering if they could be treated in some way to make the colors fast, as several other pieces of cotton bought during the war have faded. E. G. M.

There is little you can do to set colors that are inclined to run. Many dyes used in making colorful Central American articles bleed easily. Postpone the day of laundering as long as possible. there's a possibility that soaking in salt water several hours may help some. Use pure salt, not iodized, and use 1 cup of salt to 10 cups of cold water. Be sure all the fabric is covered with water and allow to remain several hours. When washing this material, use mild soap and lukewarm water. Dry in the shade but in a place where material will dry quickly.

I perspire so much under my arms in winter and summer that I have ruined one of my new dresses. The perspiration seems to have dyed it. Can you tell me what to do to remove the spot, also to keep from perspiring so much? A. B.

Perspiration of the body is usually acid, so you can sometimes restore colors changed by perspiration by treating with an alkali. Dampen the stain with water and hold it over the fumes from an open ammonia water bottle. Old stains may be alkali, however, so if those in your dress have been there for some time, try vinegar on them. Holding the stains over an absorbent pad, sponge lightly with cloth wrung out in vinegar. Colors changed by perspiration cannot always be restored, particularly if the stain is an old one.

As to keeping from perspiring there are a number of good nonperspirants on the market. When correctly used, they stop underarm perspiration and do not harm fabrics or your skin. The use of dress shields in your clothes is another way you could guard against perspiration stains.

Having noticed several queries in your column about brightening gold braid and other materials of this type, I thought the following might be of interest to your readers: During the war I discovered a perfect and simple method for removing tarnish from gold braid and believe it would be as effective on gold cloth. My husband had a naval uniform and cap whose gold had become dark green. All attempts at brightening it had no effect whatever until I experimented with ammonia. I merely dipped a wet cloth in ammonia and rubbed the gold gently. The tarnish came off so easily and completely that it was unbelievable. The tarnish did not reappear quickly either. The braid remained bright for months. H. W. P.

Do you know of any organization or hospital that would like to receive this year's Christmas cards (names removed)? It seems a shame to throw away such lovely and colorful pictures. A. C. F.

The Children's Hospital here welcomes gifts of such cards, to be used in making scrapbooks to entertain youngsters in the hospital. Send them to Nursing Office, Children's Hospital, 13th and W sts. nw. They can also be sent to Mrs. Henry Hummer, 5825 5th st. nw., who uses them in making scrapbooks and notepads for hospital patients. Montgomery Negroes Ask Better Schools

Six Negro ministers and businessmen yesterday charged Montgomery County government with "total disregard for the needs and desires" of the county's estimated 8400 Negro citizens.

The group, appearing before the Montgomery County Board of Commissioners at a meeting at Rockville, appealed for "democracy in its unadulterated form" and asked:

1. Immediate attention to Negro school conditions which they described as "deplorable."
2. Improvement of roads leading to Negro communities.
3. Removal of "Jim Crow" signs on public toilets in the Rockville Court House.
4. Extension of water and sewage lines to Negro settlements, "where practicable."
5. Appointment of some Negro policemen.
6. An opportunity for wealthy Negroes to buy bonds, proceeds of which would be used to better Negro facilities.

Spokesmen for the group was Romeo W. Horad, a Washington real estate broker who lives at 11308 Old Bladensburg rd., Silver Spring, Md.

Horad said he was speaking in behalf of a county organization with more than 1000 members, the Citizens Council of Mutual Improvement for Montgomery County.

He told the Commissioners "not one Negro school in the county compare favorably with any white school." He charged the county government "disregarded" conditions at Negro schools which, he said, include no running water, outdoor privy toilets, schools located far from Negro population centers, some beside railroad tracks. All Negro schools, he said, are overcrowded.

"We are not calling for an end to segregation," he declared. "We are merely demanding equal educational opportunities with whites."

Hinting at future legal action, possibly based on Monday's Supreme Court decision which held that Negroes are entitled to the same public education as whites, Horad told reporters after the meeting:

"If they do not improve our schools, we will attempt to send our children to the white schools."

President Brooke Johns of the board of commissioners, told Horad "we want to work with you."

Plan for two Negro schools in the "immediate future" were later announced by Richard Carpenter, assistant school superintendent in charge of school construction.

A $320,000 Negro high school in Rockville, Carpenter said and a $175,000 consolidated Negro elementary school in Laytonsville are both scheduled to be started in July.

"All of us on the Board of Education know that Negro school conditions are deplorable," he said, "and I don't blame them for complaining."

MAYFLOWER CHANGES. Come Monday the Mayflower Lounge will unveil a fresh diversion setup. Pierson Thal and his dance band will make their Washington bow. Artini and Consuelo, last seen here at the lounge's fall opening, will return for several weeks of their lacquered dance specialties . . . This implies that many fond adieus will be said this week to Florian Zabach, blond bandleader who's delighted the lounge since September, and to Singer Tommy Dix, who played host to his Washington fan club on Monday. The Dix fans, all very young, consumed cokes and popcorn like mad.

CABOOSERS OUT IN FRONT. Deke Moffitt and his Little Red Caboosers, who open in the Rainbow Room tonight, have moved right up to the front of the national entertainment express. This crew of musical comics are as full of surprises as a boxcar of dynamite. Nothing is ever rehearsed with them. Every fellow does what comes naturally. Not even Deke knows what'll happen next. Perhaps he likes it better that way. The Caboosers' name comes naturally, too—because Deke's dad and mother both worked for the Louisville & Nashville.

IRISH SENORITA. Betty Reilly, new star of the Club Cairo, is as Irish as her name. But she was reared on a Mexican hacienda, learned South-of-the-border folk songs from peons. That's how her Latin song technique was born . . . The Chandra Kaly Dancers, last seen here at the Troika, lend Oriental brilliance to their show with their Indian dances . . . For rowdy-dowdy fun there's our old pal, Mousey Garner, alumnus of Ted Healy's Three Stooges.

Put a red ring around February 23 on your calendar. That's when Dorothy Shay, now ace high as a recording artist, will arrive at the Statler. She's currently at the Stevens in Chicago.

LOTUS IS TWENTY! *The Lotus is celebrating 20 years of serene success this week. Compartively speaking that makes it a centenarian among niteries. In all that time it has never missed one day of presenting three shows a day . . . Bill and Barbara Duffy, Broadway notables, head the "Birthday Revue." Lost Graveyard Gone Forever, Md. Court Rules

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13 (AP).—There's a missing graveyard in Maryland and the Maryland Court of Appeals has ruled it's not only missing, but gone forever.

A 50-foot plot was reserved in the will of Jacob Mason at Smith and Old Pimlico rds. for a burial ground.

But the land is now property of the Roland Park Co., which uses it as part of a real estate development near Bonnie View golf course.

Engineers have combed the property and found no tombstones or lot markers, and attorneys for the company have questioned whether the graveyard ever existed. They argued the clause in Mason's deed, setting aside the plot, should be "void for uncertainty."

Today, the Court of Appeals upheld that view. The four descendants of Mason involved in the case appealed.

K. of C. Funds Frozen In Md. Lottery Case

Baltimore, Jan. 13 (AP).—Funds in a special bank account of the Maryland Knights of Columbus were frozen today by court order pending the trial of two men charged with conspiring a lottery under auspices of the fraternal organization.

Judge Herman M. Moser signed the impounding order at the request of State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells. The amount of the funds was not specified, but it was believed to be about $8100.

Defendants in the case are Frank A. Shallenberger, deputy grand knight of the K. of C. of Maryland, and John J. Dilli, identified as a member of a Baltimore printing concern.

Bank of Virginia Wins Fight onNorfolk Branch

Richmond, Va., Jan. 13 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today granted the bank of Virginia permission to establish a branch bank at Granby and Twenty-First sts. in Norfolk.

Splitting 2-to-1 in its decision, with Judge H. Lester Hooker dissenting, the commission decided against Norfolk and Portsmouth bankers, who appeared at a heated hearing of the case to testify that another bank in the area was "not necessary."

Judge Niles Made Fuel Coordinator

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13 (AP).—Judge Emory H. Niles of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore was appointed Maryland fuel coordinator today by Governor Lane.

As State coordinator, Judge Niles will tackle the problem of equalizing the distribution of the short supply of fuel oil. He also will organize a public information campaign aimed at achieving voluntary curtailment of household consumption of fuel oil.

He will attend the conference of State fuel oil coordinators in Washington Thursday, and plans to hold a meeting in Baltimore Friday of industry representatives to acquaint them with any recommendations that may be developed at Washington.

Coaches and Parlor Cars

between Chicago and St. Paul-Minneapolis

Enjoy train travel at its thrilling best! Each of the new diesel-powered, stainless steel TWIN ZEPHYRS now has five cars which feature delightful Vista-Domes—four Vista-Dome coaches and a Vista-Dome parlor-observation car, all giving a "penthouse view" of Burlington's famous Mississippi River Scenic Line, "where Nature smiles 300 miles." There is a smart new club-lounge and a colorful new dining car on each train, too. The thrill of the Vista-Dome view, combined with the smooth speed and luxurious comfort of these wonder trains, will give you an entirely new conception of train travel.

NOTE: The Vista-Dome affords a wonderful opportunity for camera fans

Burlington Leads in Passenger Progress

The ultra-modern TWIN ZEPHYRS are the first trains regularly featuring Vista-Dome cars. They "carry on" Burlington's parade of finer passenger trains, which began in 1934 when Burlington introduced the PIONEER ZEPHYR, America's first diesel-powered streamlined train. Today, 15 ZEPHYRS are in daily service.

By Richard L. Coe

THE MARINE BAND and the men of "Carousel" got together yesterday for a recording and we hope General Cates likes the result . . . The new commandant of the Marine Corps soon will find on his desk this disc, "Marine Corps Reserve Marching Song" and, if he approves, it will be the official march for the Corps' reserve drive . . . Be it noted: This in no way challenges "The Halls of Montezuma," an achievement no one's foolish enough to try . . . It's simply to stimulate men's interest in joining the reserve and makes that point clear in the chorus' tricky first words: "Citizen Soldiers." . . . Those five syllables aren't easy to sing to a snappy marching tempo and much of yesterday afternoon's recording session was spent in recording those two words right on the button . . . Busily uninventing the phonograph, Czar Petrillo will be glad to know that no coin changes hands in this deal between the Navy's whopping son and the National's lusty tenant . . . The male singers of "Carousel" offered their services, just as they have for tomorrow's appearance at Walter Reed Hospital . . . Leading man and Navy vet Henry Michel was the first to volunteer when Company Manager Hugo Schaaf and State Manager Andy Anderson (who has three sons in the Marines) laid the proposal before the men a week ago . . . Though his name won't appear on the record, it's able Eric Mattson—Enoch Snow—who sings the verse . . . The band's Major Cantelmann and "Carousel's" conductor, Joseph Littau worked hand in glove during the NBC recording, a tough job, for the Marine hall and its radiators aren't designed for such. . . . We got a real kick out of watching Santelmann work with that most stirring of service bands and were amused to find him as impressive in his working uniform as he is in full dress for "Hail to the Chief" at the White House . . . Littau's radio and recording experience makes him an admirable stickler for perfection in mike effects, exemplified in a sentence he repeated after each waxing: "That's perfect—or almost." . . . Then the band and the chorus would be at it again . . . The song's by Civilians Gene Bone and Howard Fenton, who entered the contest, sponsored by the Marines' "Reserve Bulletin" at the instigation of Singer Frank Chapman—Gladys Swarthout's husband . . . Brig. Gen. W. T. Clement, the reserve's director, gets credit for the idea from "Reserve Bulletin's" Capt. Dick Taylor, and hopes the recording will be used throughout the country in his outfit's drive . . . To all involved in yesterday's recording, congratulations and here's hoping General Cates likes it as much as did this eavesdropper.

UP AT THE THESPIAN Study Club of Washington, these are busy nights readying for Friday night's opening of "The Old Maid" in the Howard Theater . . . The Zoe Akins play opens the fourteenth season of this community theater . . . Directing the play is Dr. Anne Cooke, director of drama at Howard University, who's new to the club . . . Another newcomer, but one well remembered from Olney's last summer season is Juanita Fletcher, who appeared in "Dark Eyes" and "Laughter from a Cloud." . . . Juanita's daughter, Patricia Fletcher, also will be in the cast as will Louise Hall, one time winner of the one act play tournament's acting prize. . . . The performance will be repeated Saturday night at the same hour—8:40.

UNA O'CONNOR is coming and that's good news . . . Remember Una as the fortune teller in "Ivy," a brief appearance but a delightful one? . . . Miss O'Connor has joined the cast of "The Linden Tree," the J. B. B. Priestley play bound for a pre-Broadway week at the National next month . . . Since she went to Hollywood for "Cavalcade" back in 1932, the stage has not seen much of this wry, waspish Irish player and we're looking forward to her.

ROBERT TAYLOR is another player bound this way, though only for a brief look-in . . . He's coming down to the Navy ball set for the Mayflower on the 22nd . . . A lieutenant in the Naval Reserve, Bob will emcee entertainment at the Navy relief dinner dance.

AL SHERMAN, who's added Film Classics, Inc., to what must be a mass of accounts, will be today's speaker at the Washington Film Council's first luncheon of the year . . . Sherman will talk on "Opening New Channels for Distributions." . . . The D. C. Motion Picture Council met yesterday morning for a discussion of motion picture evaluation led by Father Gilbert V. Hartke, head of Catholic University's speech and drama department . . . Metro's film, "The Greenie" also was shown.

READER HERBERT L. SCHON suggests that we tell you once in a while what's going on at Ford's Theater over in Baltimore . . . Last night another Priestley play opened after its New York run, "An Inspector Calls," with Thomas Mitchell and Melville Cooper. The play continues in Baltimore through Saturday night, but we're not discounting it as a National possibility this season . . . Next week the theater will be open only three days, "Dr. Social" taking over for four performances Thursday night the 22nd. This play is by Joseph L. Estry and features Dean Jagger, Virginia Gilmore and Al Shean.

TODAY: "The Wistful Widow of Wagon Gap" opens at Keith's and "The Great Mr. Handel" begins its fourth week at the Little.

WISTFUL BUT WILLIN': Marjorie Main, as a husband-hunting widow, and Lou Costello, a two-gun sheriff, in "The Wistful Widow of Wagon Gap," which arrives on Keith's screen today. Yes, Bud Abbott is along, too, for the comedy team's first venture into the Western field

Falls Church Sets Police Probe

Citizens' complaints of inefficiency and rudeness in the Falls Church Police Department are being investigated by the Town Council.

Following a council meeting Monday night, Mayor Fenner Hazelgrove appointed Councilmen Sherman Wells, John McRae, and James Durant to study the matter and report their findings to the next council meeting.

Town Manager Roy F. Dunn, supporting the move for investigation, emphasized that all complaints received by the town so far have either been hearsay, or complainants have declined to give their names.

According to the council, "proper protection of the morals, property and general welfare" of Falls Church residents requires "a police force in which a good and sound morale is maintained, and one in which the people have full confidence."

The council authorized the three-man investigating committee to employ "competent assistance" if necessary in carrying out their study.

Tax-Free Instruments For Church Units Favor

By The Associated Press

A bill to eliminate the excise tax on musical instruments sold to religious institutions received support yesterday of Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.).

In a letter to Chairman Millikin (R., Colo.) of the Senate Finance Committee, Robertson expressed "the hope that at an early date your committee will favorably report to the Senate" the House measure.

Robertson pointed out that Representative Almond (D., Va.) offered such legislation in the House and it was later passed as an amendment to a bill to eliminate excise taxes on X-ray cameras and other photographic apparatus and the 10 per cent tax on jewelry as it affected the first $25 of the sale price.

Capital Transit To Fight Entry Of Bus Line

Capital Transit Co. and Anchorage Transportation, Inc., will lock horns at a public hearing January 22 over the latter's proposal to extend its service from the Maryland-District line to downtown Washington.

The Public Utilities Commission announced yesterday it will conduct the hearing in Room 203 of the District Building, beginning at 10 a. m.

Anchorage Transportation, Inc.—which brings passengers to the District line from Baltimore, Westminster, Ellicott City and other points in northern and western Maryland—asked PUC's permission last November to extend service to 12th st. and New York ave. nw.

The company also asked PUC to designate a routing by way of Georgia and Alaska aves., 16th st., K st. and 11th st. to the terminal at 12th st. and New York ave. It sought privileges to discharge Maryland passengers inside the District and to pick up passengers within the District for delivery in Maryland.

Capital Transit Co. protested the application, saying it would be unlawful because PUC hasn't issued a certificate to the effect that the "competitive" line is necessary for the convenience of the public. CTC further contended that buses "would contribute substantially to congestion in the downtown area."

PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan said the hearing would consider both the Anchorage application and Capital Transit's protest against it.

Fire Alarm Improvements Authorized

Improved fire alarm facilities for the two Federal housing communities, Calvert Houses and Carry Houses, were authoried yesterday by Prince Georges County Commissioners.

The board acted on a request from Bernard E. Loshburgh, deputy in charge of operations at the National Capital Housing Authority.

Direct lines from Calvert Houses at Riverdale to the Hyattsville fire control board and from Carry Houses at Suitland to the Capitol Heights fire board will be installed at the Housing Authority's expense, the board decided.

The board also voted to abandon plans for a third-story addition to the County Service Building at Hyattsville for juvenile detention quarters. The Juvenile Court advisory board advised the commissioners the number of juvenile delinquents was too small to justify the expense.

4-Point Plan Adopted to Develop South

Old Point Comfort, Va., Jan. 13 (AP).—A four-point program designed to raise the South's standard of living was adopted today by the South-wide Conservation Conference of the Southern Association of Science and Industry.

The association's committee on conservation, announcing it had tentatively adopted a proposal to change its name to the "Sasi Resource-Management Committee," said these four "essential steps are necessary" to achieve its goal:

"1. To discover the present status of Southern resources through an extensive and thorough survey.

To Study Procedures

"2. To consider present procedures for their use and to discard those which are inefficient and wasteful.

"3. Speed the application of resource-management procedure now available, through education of industry and the public generally.

"4. Encourage, through research, the development of new and more effective procedures for intelligent resource-management."

The program was announced by C. F. DeLaBarre, professor of biology at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and chairman of the Sasi Conservation Committee, at the concluding session of the three-day conference at the Chamberlin Hotel.

Speeches Summarized

Summarizing conference discussions, speeches and reports of subcommittees on water, soil, resource education, wildlife, marine resources and mineral, De La Barre explained that the committee decided on the change in name because:

"It was brought out at the conference that conservation to many people implies only saving and thrift, really 'rationing,' whereas the committee's principal objections include raising Southern living standards through more extensive use of basic Southern resources."

Through developments in science and technology, it was brought out at the conference, "the productivity of soil and water can be tremendously enhanced through the application of good management practices," DeLaBarre said.

Mathis Judged Mentally Ill, Trial Off

Towson, Md., Jan. 13 (AP).—Walter Ray Mathis, 40, of Alexandria, Va., contractor and wartime pilot, was today judged too mentally unbalanced to stand trial for murder.

He faced the charge in the slaying August 9 of his former wife's new husband, Kenneth Eugene Colbert, 31, of Middle River, a suburb of Baltimore.

Judge John B. Gontrum ruled in Baltimore County Circuit Court here that Mathis was mentally incapable of standing trial after hearing two psychiatrists' reports. Testifying were Drs. Andrew G. Gillis, associate member of the State Board of Mental Hygiene, and George H. Preston, State commissioner of mental hygiene.

They testified Mathis returned from service as an Army air transport command pilot so frustrated and mentally upset that his mind is steadily deteriorating. Acquaintances of Mathis said a combination of war worries and domestic difficulties had made him a mental wreck.

The doctors said they are unable to determine whether Mathis was sane at the time of Colbert's slaying, but they said the brain deterioration set in and had been progressive since 1945.

Judge Gontrum ruled he would not be able to assist counsel in conducting a defense and remanded him to jail pending transfer to a State institution.

Mathis was divorced from his first wife, Pearl, in 1936 and shortly married the present Mrs. Ruby Colbert. They were in turn divorced in 1946. Ruby married Colbert and they had a daughter, now seven months old. Mrs. Pearl Mathis returned to her former husband and they were remarried, and lived at 424 E. Glendale st., Alexandria.

Before his remarriage, Mathis was a patient at two Veterans' Administration facilites. He had told a consultant he was "fast getting Ruby out of my mind" but he acknowledge to police that he had corresponded with her since her marriage to Colbert.

Mathis told investigators he had a date with Ruby August 9 and went to her apartment when she failed to appear. He said he found Colbert at the place and they got in an argument. Colbert was shot twice and died from loss of blood.

A neighbor who heard two shots chased a car which drove away from the building and turned the Florida license number over to police. It was traced to Mrs. Mathis' home at Manatee, Fla., and then to Alexandria.

Detectives found Mrs. Colbert and the baby in a nearby tavern after the shooting. She said she had sent Colbert back for more clothes for the little girl.

Mathis appeared dejected all through today's proceedings. He appeared in court nattily dressed in a gray, double-breasted suit. Mrs. Mathis embraced him, sobbing bitterly, at the conclusion of the hearing.

Man Accused Of Slaying Girl Seized

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

HAROLD BEACH,

23, found working at a Baltimore filling station, was jailed yesterday before being returned to Cleveland to face a charge of murder. He is accused of the New Year's Day knife-slaying of 8-year-old Sheila Ann Tuley

Baltimore, Jan. 13 (AP).—A 23-year-old former inmate of a New York mental institution was whisked through legal proceedings here today and in less than 24 hours after his arrest was on the way to Cleveland to face a charge of murder for the knife-slaying of an 8-year-old girl.

Chewing gum, Harold Beach, jr., waived extradition and was delivered to the custody of two Cleveland detectives.

They had a statement in which they said the slack-jawed, bespectacled youth admitted stabbing to death Sheila Ann Tuley.

Beach told of picking up the girl New Year's Day after he watched a movie double-feature—"Savage Love" and "Native Bride." He said he led her into an alley and stabbed her in the back when she started to scream.

Cleveland detectives said they started to hunt Beach after discovering he had a criminal sex record and disappeared the day after the killing. Beach had served five years in an institution at Napanoch, N. Y. He was released last March.

The accused said he came to Baltimore to visit his mother. She was questioned for two hours today, then tearfully kised her son goodby and was half-carried from police headquarters.

Asked how he felt, Beach answered:

"Well, I'll just have to go back and see what happens. The most I can get is death. So what?"

School Board Votes to Buy Heurich Tract

Purchase of 30 acres of the Heurich tract on Colesville rd. near Queens Chapel rd. as site for a projected Hyattsville area high school was voted yesterday by Prince Georges County Board of Education, meeting in Upper Marlboro.

The school will serve 1500 students from Hyattsville, Mount Rainier, Riverdale and Greenbelt. Present high schools then will become junior highs.

The board asked the county commissioners for two million dollars remaining of the four-million-dollar school bond issue authorized by the General Assembly to complete construction of Laurel High, Landover Hills Elementary, Frederick Sasscer High at Upper Marlboro, Oxon Hill High and Fairmount Heights Elementary Schools and equip them.

The fund also will provide for a new senior high and vocational training center at Bladensburg, a junior-senior high at Fairmount Heights and will defray cost of plans for the proposed Hyattsville area high school and a new junior-senior high at Suitland.

New teachers were named as follows: Patti Cosgrove, Lanham Elementary; Ethel Golden, Bowie Elementary; Lempi Cody, Mount Rainier Elementary; William Rudewick, Lyndon Hill Junior High; Michael Lombardo, Gwynn Park High School; Christopher Rose, Oxon Hill High School; Charlotte Compher, Laurel High School, and Eva Coachman, Lincoln Negro School.

Mrs. Rose Retires After 30 Years

After 30 years of service in Montgomery County schools, 21 of them as principal of Chevy Chase Elementary School, Mrs. Anna P. Rose was retired yesterday. No successor was named.

Mrs. Rose, who lives in Kensington, said, "I think I've worked long enough."

Joseph A. Sivigny resigned as principal of Montgomery Hills Junior High. He will be succeeded by Donald A. Meagher.

The board of education accepted a low bid of $42,340 for construction of a two-classroom addition to Bradley Elementary School and a $16,840 bid for addition of one classroom at Woodlin Elementary.

Other resignations accepted were: Mrs. Frances Patterson, Rockville; Miss Gladys Darby, Bethesda; Phyllis Hinkson, Kensington, and Miss Jean Coulter, Takoma Junior.

Appointed were: Mrs. Dorothy W. McHenry, Rockville; Mrs. Sonia A. Shine, Rockville; Miss Frances Brenner, Rockville; Mrs. Babette G. MacPherson, Kensington, and Fred H. Hilton, Leland Junior High. Emerald C. Bristow, Gaithersburg, was granted a leave of absence.

Blood Test Illegal, Slayer Appeal Alleges

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13 (AP).—Bruce Davis, 31, convicted hammer slayer of Laurel, Md., today asked the State Appeals Court here if his own blood could be used without forewarning as evidence against him.

Davis, a mechanic, was convicted June 11 of the hammer slaying of Mrs. Florence McAllister, 29, a waitress, in the Burtonsville, Md., home of her relatives in December 1946. A Washington County Court sentenced him to life imprisonment.

Attorneys E. Stuart Bushong and Paul B. Mules, his counsel, argued in an appeal today that the circumstances in which a sample of his blood was taken violated the State constitution. This says no man ought to be compelled to give evidence against himself.

Davis was arrested by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation at a Memphis, Tenn., hospital. He was being treated after drinking a bottle of iodine.

Returning to Rockville, he was examined by a physician who asked for a sample of his blood, without explaining why it was wanted.

State witnesses at the trial said Dr. Gilbert V. Hartley had taken the sample and Davis had made no objection.

Davis' attorneys said he thought the blood was being taken to aid in his treatment.

During the trial, testimony showed blood of the victim's type and of Davis' type was found on a suit he had worn.

The State argued Davis had not been misled and that his "complaint was merely that he supposed" the blood was being taken for one purpose and it turned out to be for another.

Buggs Island Dam Low Bid Exceeds Federal Estimate

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 13 (AP).—A low bid of $15,794,454.60 opened here today by Col. G. T. Derby, U. S. Army district engineer, for construction of the main concrete dam at Buggs Island flood control and hydroelectric project exceeded by slightly more than a million dollars the maximum permitted by the Government.

The Government estimate was $11,704,235, with a 25 per cent allowance placing it at $14,630,294. Colonel Derby said award of the contract could not be made on the basis of present bids, since they were more than 25 per cent greater than the base Governmen estimate.

The low bid was submitted by Morrison-Knudson Co., Inc., of New York, and was a joint bid, including Walsh Construction Co. of New York; B. Perini & Sons, Framington, Mass.; Henry J. Kaiser Co., Oakland, Calif.; Ralph E. Mills Construction Co., Roanoke, Va.; Blythe Bros., Charlotte, N. C., and Peter Kiewit Sons, Inc.

More Precincts Are Proposed For Arlington

Arlington will have 24 voting precincts instead of its present 11 if recommendations of the County's Redistricting Commission are carried out.

The commission's report, announced yesterday, is a supplement to its January (1947) findings. The earlier findings called for only a moderate reshuvling of precinct lines.

Arlington Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy must approve the redistricting blueprint to put it into effect.

Judge McCarthy has taken no action on 1947 redistricting plans at request of Arlington civic leaders, who felt a shakeup in precinct boundaries would confuse voters in a year of many elections.

In their new plan, Commission Members Charles R. Fenwick, William G. Watt and Ralph Kimble recommended that 10 of the present 11 precincts be split to form new voting units.

Admitting the changes will cause "a certain amount of dislocation," commission members said rapid population growth made changes necessary and that yesterday's plan will obviate "the necessity for further subdivision for many years."

Under the new plan, Arlington Precinct would be split to provide three new units: Barcroft, Columbia and Fairlington Precincts.

Two new precincts, Westover and Woodlawn, would be set up in Ballston precinct; Carne would be divided to make a new Walkers Chapel precinct.

Cherrydale precinct would be split to make a new Thrifton precinct, and Lee precinct would be established in Clarendon No. 1. Clarendon No. 2 would be split to provide a Courtland precinct.

An Overlee Knolls precinct would be created in East Falls Church, and an Ashton Heights precinct at Lyon Park. Rosslyn precinct would be split to provide a new Park Lane precinct, with an Aurora Hills precinct created in Virginia Highlands.

Airport Manager's License Reinstated

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 13 (AP).—A Martinsburg man whose airport manager's license was suspended several months ago was qualified again today to manage the North End Airport he owns there on his promise to continue improvements in operation already started.

The State Aeronautics Commission reinstated the license of P. M. Ruppenthal, but ordered Director Hubert H. Stark to "continue to check on the airport and operators thereon."

50 Winchester Girls Enter Beauty Contest

Winchester, Va., Jan. 13.—More than 50 Winchester girls have entered the Winchester Voiture Forty and Eight beauty contest to be held at Handley High School January 23. The contest is open to girls 15 and over from Frederick, Clarke, Warren, Shenandoah and Page Counties, according to General Chairman Robert Pizanno.

Falls Church Recreation Site Offered

Burns N. Gibson, former member of the Fairfax board of supervisors, yesterday offered to sell to Falls Church a 5-acre lot at half its appraised value as the site of a proposed town recreation center.

The lot adjoins Gibson's home at 155 Hillwood ave., and is close to the Falls Church High School.

Gibson said he has been offered as much as $125,000 for the lot. He told Town Manager Roy F. Dunn he was willing to halve the land's appraisal cost if the town would use the site for a center.

Falls Church has two plans to provide a building for the recreation center. Civic leaders said Monday that a 230 by 20 foot prefabricated building now at Fort Hunt, Va., will be available if the town will haul it to Falls Church.

Plans for a permanent building are being drawn at no charge by the Falls Church architectual firm of Spector & Montgomery.

Builder Sued On Housing Act Violations

The Federal Government yesterday sought an injunction against the Tyler Corp. of Falls Church for alleged violation of the Veterans' Emergency Housing Act of 1946.

The suit, filed in Alexandria District Court, charges that the company obtained Government priorities for building materials and then (1) failed to follow submitted building specifications, and (2) sold the houses at above-ceiling prices.

The company, the suit says, obtained priorities from the Civilian Production Administration for 126 single family dwellings to be built on Graham rd. between Lee hwy. and Lee blvd. in Fairfax County. The company is now building Tyler Gardens, a 500-unit apartment development in Falls Church.

The Government asked for an injunction to (1) prevent further violation of the Housing Act; (2) require the company to repay to purchasers payments in excess of allowed price; (3) require the company to complete houses in accord with submitted plans, and (4) "grant such other relief as may be just end equitable."

The company will have 20 days in which to file an answer.

Former Runner Becomes Head of Frederick Bank

Frederick, Md., Jan. 13 (AP).—R. E. Delaplaine, who 47 years ago began work as a runner in the Farmers & Mechanics Bank of Frederick, was elected president of the bank today.

Delaplaine, who is copublisher of the Federick News and Post with his brother, W. T. Delaplaine, started in the bank after his graduation from high school in 1901. He worked up to bookkeeper before he left a few years later to take over management of the Frederick News, which was founded by his father, the late W. T. Delaplaine, sr.

The directors elected Benjamin L. Shuff executive vice president, and William M. Storm vice president and attorney.

Va. Chamber Proposes Joint County Services

Richmond, Va., Jan. 13 (AP).—The committee on taxation and government of the Virginia State chamber of commerce today recommended more efficient and economical county government in the State through more extensive development of joint or regional administration of county services through voluntary county agreements.

A study of county government in Virginia by the committee showed that the cost has increased more than 100 per cent in 10 years, reaching 42 million dollars in 1945.

Annapolis Recreation Bond Issue Approved

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13 (AP).—A $50,000 recreation bond issue was approved by the Annapolis City Council today. It will be devoted to building a war memorial stadium at Annapolis High School.

Revenue from the stadium above maintenance costs would go to pay off the bond issue and any surplus to improve the recreation center. A war memorial commisson, named by Mayor William U. McCready, will be in charge of operating the stadium.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

PENNY

SO YOU ACTUALLY BELIEVE IN THE POWER OF MIND OVER MATTER, ELWOOD?
POSITIVELY, PENNY.
THE POWER OF THE MIND OVER THE MERE PHYSICAL ASPECTS OF LIFE IS UNDENIABLE.
ALL PHYSICAL SENSATION IS PURELY IMAGINARY.
IN THAT CASE, ELWOOD, YOU WON'T MIND CHANGING PLACES.
I KNOW YOU'LL THINK I'M TOO UTTERLY SILLY BUT I KEPT IMAGINING I WAS COLD BACK THERE.

GOING AROUND THE COUNTRY ORGANIZIN' LADIES' AUXILIARIES MUST BE VERY INTERESTING, MRS. CUTIE?
YES, INDEED! I'M REALLY AMAZED THAT YOU HAVEN'T HAD ONE HERE BEFORE -ESPECIALLY WITH YOU BEING NATIONAL COMMANDER.
WELL, I'M SURE IF I'D KNOWN THAT YOU'D BE SENT HERE TO ORGANIZE IT, WE WOULD HAVE HAD ONE — LONG AGO!
OH, COMMANDER. -YOU SAY THE NICEST THINGS!
FOR A MAN WHO IS SO OPPOSED TO A LADIES' AUXILIARY, PHIL IS SURE GIVING THAT ORGANIZER A LOT OF TIME, MICKEY!
YEAH! WELL HE'S DETERMINED NOT TO LET 'EM USE THE CLUB HOUSE - AND SHE'S PROBABLY GIVING HIM QUITE AN ARGUMENT!
IT'LL BE A PLEASURE TO SHOW YOU OUR CLUB HOUSE, MRS. CUTIE -AND HOW ABOUT US HAVING DINNER AFTERWARDS?
THAT WOULD BE LOVELY!

Bill Is Having Trouble With the Laundries Again

What this country needs is a good long-handled plastic knife suitable for slitting open shirt pockets which have been sealed off by starch.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Marguerite Raudenbush of the Fairfax Hotel wonders about the strange perferences of some people, as expressed in the recent classified ad which read:

"Desire to share attractive 3-room apt. with piano."

WELL-TURNED PHRASES

In the year I've been holding forth in this corner, about a dozen readers have sent me clippings of Gutman's Ad Chat, which appears in Wheeling (W. Va.) newspapers.

It's an advertisement for a firm that sells advertising, but it's in the form of a column of humorous items, with very little "commercial." Really quite clever.

Naomi Rabinowitz of 2007 Massachusetts ave. nw., forwards a current copy in which she has circled a wisecrack suggesting that:

"A plaque saying 'Washington Slept Here' should be placed over the entrance to the Pentagon."

I don't agree with the sentiment expressed, but I will concede that it's a well-turned phrase. However, I think an even better excerpt is:

"This is the season of the year when gentlemen befur blondes."

PERSONAL NOTES

Jack Ashby, 2604 Lee blvd., Arlington, Va.: Thanks for the interesting background on the Whiffenpoofs. The only thing that still remains obscure to me is: How did they manage to lubricate their songs with so much beer during prohibition?

J. J. Meyer, Dunn Loring, Va.: You must have gotten one of the first papers off the press that night. We caught that one quickly. But what's more interesting than our typo is your address. For what or whom is Dunn Loring named?

MISCELLANY

Mrs. Rose A. Flagg of 2503 Brentwood rd. ne. offers public thanks to John Q. Hunt of 3500 14th st. nw. Hunt drives Diamond Cab No. 20, and recently returned to Mrs. Flagg a purse full of moola she had left in his vehicle . . . The Washington Elk (official B. P. O. E. publication) for January reprints an item which appeared in this space because it's about S. A. Freas, who is a member of the Elks . . . The Trenton Terrace Nursery School (run cooperatively by mothers) wants to buy a copy of the book, "Parents and Children Go to School," by Dorothy Baruch. They want this out-of-print volume for study purposes, and anybody willing to sell or lend his copy is asked to call Mrs. Reba M. Gillman at Victor 8190 . . . Young Pete Schickele, who made such a hit when the St. Paul's Players put on "The Man Who Came to Dinner," is now in Fargo, N. Dak. Another former member of the group, 14-year-old Eunice Voke, can be addressed at 28 Lone Valley, Purbrook, Hants, England . . . And speaking of the younger generation, streetcar tokens for Children's Hospital have been received from 6-year-old Judith Sandra Tepper of 3039 M st. nw. . . . In the adult league our thanks go to Mrs. W. G. Lee of 1514 Spring pl. nw., the folks at the Vest Pocket Ranch, Gaithersburg, Md., Mrs. B. H. Hall of Silver Spring, Md. (check inclosed), Charles H. Stello, jr., of 2022 1st st. nw., Robert W. Livingston of 1711 N. Edgewood st., Arlington, Va. (cash, too), George L. Woolley of 2714 Quarry rd. nw., and Charles "Let's Put on a Show for the Veterans" Kohen of 716 17th st. nw. . . . Add similies: As annoying as a flickering fluorescent light.

SOLUTION

Our recent discussion of the problem of disposing of old razor blades brings a sound suggestion from Mrs. Virginia Allan of 1825 New Hampshire ave. nw.

Many long years ago the Allans discovered that an ordinary aspirin box will hold about 50 old blades.

So they keep a box in their medicine cabinet, and when it's full it can be thrown away without danger.

Merle M. TeSelle of 1644 Columbia rd. nw. also has a simple solution. When he unwraps a new blade, he puts the old blade in the oil paper, and then can dispose of it as he pleases.

For me, however, there's no problem. I use a straight razor.

ADD SIGNS

In a note fetchingly accompanied by several streetcar tokens, Mrs. Frank L. Weaver of 15 Keswick st., Garrett Park, Md., recalls the sign she once saw outside a small hotel:

Cold War Not Yet Won

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's note: This is the second of Drew Pearson's columns on the most important problem facing the country, the danger of war with Russia.)

Some observers have come back from Europe recently saying that the cold war has been won. I do not agree.

General Spaatz

Russian-inspired communism, it is true, has taken some severe jolts in France and Italy, where attempted strikes, riots and revolution failed. But they already are being revived. And everyone who knows the Soviet system also knows that when the boys in the Politburo take a defeat on one front it only increases their determination to score victory on another.

So not only will they take more and tougher punches at France and Italy, but already Soviet preparations for eventual we-don't-know-what have been intensified in other areas.

Meeting with a group of Senators not long ago, Chief of the Air Force Gen. "Toughy" Spaatz revealed:

1. The Red army now has taken over German jet-plane plants and developed jet-propelled planes which are faster than those built by the United States Army.

2. The Russians have improved on the German buzz-bomb to a point where they now are producing a deadly controlled missile that will travel between 1700 and 1800 miles, whereas the imperfectly controlled German buzz-bomb merely flew across the English Channel.

3. The Russians, according to General Spaatz, have complete information about the location, size and production capacity of every air plant in the United States, to say nothing of landing fields, control towers and other aviation facilities.

Russia Prepares for War

Even if we assume that General Spaatz was subject to the usual exuberance of a military man, the fact is inescapable that at the last Russian military maneuvers, six new types of jet planes were flown in view of foreign military attaches—the Ilyushin, Yakovlev, Sukhov, Tupelev and Lavochkin, and Mikoyan.

It is also a fact that French, Italian and German war prisoners released from Russia all tell the same story—of feverish war production behind the Ural Mountains; of demobilized Soviet troops, instructed to remain under military supervision to work in munitions factories because a new war is impending—the last great inevitable conflict between communism and the forces of fascism.

It is also a fact that most German prisoners are being kept in Russia to work in these factories and that only prisoners no longer fit for physical labor are being returned to Germany.

Reliable intelligence reports also tell of intensive air base building in eastern Siberia, with 51 fields in that general area, 6 being on the Bering Sea nearest Alaska. It is also known that the Russians now have acquired and perhaps refined all the secrets of the German submarine, including the Nazi "snorkel." This is a device allowing subs to run constantly under water, without coming up to the surface to recharge batteries. Toward the end of the war the Germans had rubberized their subs so that radar could not detect them, had installed miraculous new motors, and were using canvas breathers which extend just above the water and are extremely hard to see.

All of these secrets the Russians now have, and some of their 256 submarines have been sighted around Greenland, Kiska and only 300 miles from Pearl Harbor.

U. S. Prepares Also

On the other hand, certain military preparations in the United States probably are causing worry in Moscow.

Last summer, for instance, Secretary of the Army Royall released a report calling for the use of natural caverns and abandoned mines for underground aircraft factories in the United States. And while Secretary Royall would have been remiss had he not warned of the need for protecting air factories, and while United States military preparations are far less offensive than the Russians', nevertheless Moscow uses them to try to keep the Russian people in a constant state of jitters.

However, there is one small school of thought in the United States which does give the Politburo legitimate reason for worry—namely the school which believes that the United States should wage a "preventive" war now, rather than a defensive war later.

It is no secret to the Russians that such a school does exist in the United States and that it is headed by the chief military adviser to the President—Admiral William D. Leahy.

Most important in Leahy's background is the fact that when chief of naval operations in 1937 he sold Franklin Roosevelt on the idea that a preventive blockade of Japan could stop what was sure to be eventual war in the Pacific.

It is no secret that Admiral Leahy now proposes applying the same general strategy to Russia. In other words, if there is to be eventual war, he would pick the time and place rather than let the Russians do the picking. And he would pick it early, when the United States is better prepared, rather than late.

Put in blunt, cold words, that is the heart of the Russian problem in the minds of some of our top military strategists. Whether they are right or not, and what are the alternatives in this most important of all questions will be discussed in future Washington Merry-Go-Round columns.
